EMPIRE POLICY MUST ENDURE —CHURCHILL

Bares Reservations in Atlantic Charter.

LONDON, April 21 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill assured the states of the British empire today that they would emerge from the war with their imperial preference plan of mutually advantageous tariff rates unhampered by the Atlantic Charter or by the 1942 Anglo-American lend-lease agreement.

He told an approving house of commons that President Roosevelt had assured him that "we were no more committed to abolition of imperial preference than the American government was committed to abolition of their protective tariff."

Stresses Trade Needs.

The prime minister said there need be no clash between the unity of the commonwealth and empire and their associations with the United States and Russia, and added:

"There must be a wholehearted endeavor begun in good time to promote the greatest interchange of goods and services between various communities of the world, and to strive for that process of betterment of the standards of living in every country without which expanding markets are impossible and without which world prosperity is a dream which might easily turn into a nightmare."

With a meeting of empire premiers approaching, Churchill said:

"At my first meeting with the President of the United States in Newfoundland at the time of the so-called Atlantic Charter, and before the United States had entered the war—a meeting on very anxious and critical matters—I asked for insertion of the following words in the Atlantic Charter which can be read in that document:

"'With due respect for their existing obligations. . . .'

Inserted as Safeguard.

"These are the limiting words and they were inserted for the express purpose of retaining to this house and to the dominions the fullest possible rights and liberties over the question of imperial preference.

[Under imperial preference the states belonging to the British empire charge lower import duties on inter-empire goods than they do on those arriving from other countries. Sometimes this means waiving altogether duties on empire goods.]

"Again in February, 1942, when the United States was our closest ally, I did not agree to article seven of the mutual aid [lend-lease] agreement without having previously obtained from the President a definite assurance that we were no more committed to the abolition of imperial preference than the American government was committed to abolition of their protective tariffs.

Resents Sneers in U. S.

"The agreement [article seven] for discussing as to how a greater volume of trade and a more harmonious flow of trade can be created in the immediate post-war years leaves us in every respect, so far as action is concerned, perfectly free."

He said British commonwealth and empire unity was stronger than ever, adding:

"It is extraordinary what a business it has become to sneer at the British empire. Those who have tried it in the United States have been discredited. Those who have tried it in the dominions have found no public backing. . . .

Extols Russian Ties.

"I have never conceived that the fraternal association with the United States would militate in any way against the unity of the British commonwealth or empire or breed ill feeling with our great Russian ally, with whom we are bound by a 20 years treaty. I do not think we need to choose this or that. With wisdom, vigor, and courage, we may get the best [out] of both.

"We have often said of our British empire, 'In my father's house, there are many mansions.' So in this far greater world structure which we shall surely raise out of the ruins of desolating war, there is room for all generous and free associations of a special character, so long as they are not disloyal to the world cause, nor seek to bar the forward progress of mankind."

U. S. Foreign Policy Called Hate Breeder

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 21.—Protection of the United States should be the nation's fundamental foreign policy, yet we seem committed to a policy of recapturing occupied territories for other countries without regard for American interests, Sen. Bushfield [R., S. D.] charged in a senate speech today.

American foreign policy, as enunciated by President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull, is neither comprehensive nor stable, Sen. Bushfield said. Even after Hull's April 9 radio speech on the subject, he asserted, no one outside the administration knows what the nation's policy is.

Bushfield said administration spokesmen have referred to the Atlantic Charter, in which President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill upheld the right of all nations to choose their own form of government, as the cornerstone of American policy. But, he declared, the charter has been "thrown out the window."

Red Grab Approved.

"Approval of the land grab [of Baltic nations] by Russia has been given," Bushfield said. "Apparently we are expected to recover Hongkong and Singapore for Britain, and the Dutch East Indies for the Netherlands, but what about the many important questions which should be discussed by the American people and by the congress?

"The protection of the United States is our fundamental foreign policy. It is the cornerstone of our whole structure of national life. Any policy that is in derogation of America and her people should be rejected. America is our first consideration. The world should be told of our aims. If we evade or conceal, there will be misunderstanding."

Assails Policy in Italy.

Bushfield read to the senate the portion of Hull's speech in which the secretary of state said it was the policy of this country to aid in the creation of a democratic government in Italy.

"In other words," Bushfield said, "the secretary construes the Atlantic Charter for Italy to mean that the Italian people can have any kind of government they want just as long as they take the kind the secretary of state and the President say they can have.

"It is possible the Italian people may decide they want a king. Are we going to thrust down the throats of all the people in the world the kind of government and the personnel in it which Mr. Hull and Mr. Roosevelt decide is best for them? Is that what our 10 million American boys are fighting for?"

Other Areas Ignored.

CHARGE BRITISH SELL CARBON BLACK FROM LEND-LEASE SUPPLY

New York, April 21 [Special].—Despite the announcement that the lend-lease agreement modification which would permit Britain to re-export lend-lease materials will not become effective until it has been ratified by that country and the United States, exporters today charged that Britain already is processing lend-leased carbon black into news ink and exporting the product to India, while American exports to that market are prevented.

Leo T. Crowley, foreign economic administrator, it was said, has been asked to investigate the situation.

Asserting that the United States is virtually the only source of carbon black, an important raw material in the manufacture of news ink, and that all shipments of the material to Britain have been made under lend-lease, exporters said they were "surprised" to learn from their Indian import agents that Britain is in a position to supply such inks and that quotas for importation from the United States have been abolished.

Tho the exporters professed agreement with the objectives of the proposed modification of the lend-lease agreements, they asserted they did not believe the arrangements should be such as to permit Britain "to rob American exporters of their normal markets." The proposed modification would free Britain from a pledge under which that country agreed not to re-export lend-lease goods.

U.S. WILL GIVE MOST TO FUND OF 8 BILLIONS

Proposal Indorsed by 30 Nations.

BY LAURENCE BURD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 21.—Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, meeting with members of congress in secret session, today outlined a New Deal supported plan for an 8 to 10 billion dollar post-war international monetary fund, to which the United States would contribute about 2½ billions.

Financial experts of 30 out of 34 nations consulted have indorsed the proposal, but no nation has made a final commitment, the secretary said. The approving experts, he added, include those from Great Britain, China, Russia, and Canada as well as many "exile" and South American governments.

The announced purposes of the program, as outlined by Morgenthau, are to promote stability of member nations' currencies, facilitate world trade by eliminating foreign restrictions, and give "confidence" to member countries.

U. S. Scooped Again.

Morgenthau, while outlining the program in secret to members of two senate and three house committees in two separate sessions, released a digest of his statement to the press but forbade release of its contents until 7 p. m. [Chicago time] tonight.

As on many previous occasions, however, the administration was "scooped" by the British government, which announced the plan in London more than two hours earlier in apparent violation of a "simultaneous release" agreement which Morgenthau said had been made by all participating nations.

Members of congress who heard the secretary said plans are being laid for further discussion of the plan at an international monetary conference to be attended by high officials of the 34 nations.

Morgenthau's published statement said President Roosevelt plans to have members of congress, among others, represent the United States at the proposed conference, which is expected to be held within the next few months. The place was not announced.

Joint Statement Issued.

A joint statement by the various nations' fiscal experts, released by Morgenthau, said the plan calls for contributions by the 34 countries of about 8 billion dollars in gold or local currency. A previous proposal for a 5 billion dollar fund was abandoned because that sum was found "inadequate," treasury officials said. If all nations—rather than just the 34—join in the new program, the

DAVID'S IN PINK; SO'S TIN OUTPUT

David Pink, 40, a laborer, was released from alimony row in the County jail yesterday by Superior Judge John A. Sbarbaro when it was discovered that his absence is a one man bottleneck in the "white pickling" department of the Indiana Harbor works of the Inland Steel company.

"Our production of tin plate is threatened by David Pink's absence," M. M. McClure, superintendent of industrial relations, informed the court. "Five hundred men had to stop work recently because of it."

Pink, who lives at 7529 Lafayette av., was sent to jail April 13 for being $248 in arrears in his payments of temporary alimony of $50 a month to his wife, Eleanor, of 7104 Champlain av.

Pals Tie Up the Works.

His absence was noticed quickly by other workers in the tin mill, particularly by the three other members of his "pickling team." They lift paper-thin sheets of steel, 20 by 24 inches, and dip them in a pickling liquor that prepares the steel for tin plating.

The crew gets paid according to tonnage, and with Pink, the star, on the job the men have been receiving $350 to $400 a month. Without Pink the others did not do so well. They wanted Pink out of jail, and told the company so. Otherwise, they said, they would not work. On Wednesday the team laid off for half an hour to show what would happen if they quit.

The flow of pickled steel plates ceased, and 500 men down the line of the tin plate mill marked time.

Plant Appeals to Judge.

McClure wrote a desperate letter to Judge Sbarbaro.

"This is one of the most unusual situations I have ever been confronted with in respect to manning a steel mill with a complement of between 12,000 and 14,000 men," he wrote. "We feel if something can be done to release this man the situation will be entirely remedied."

Judge Sbarbaro's clerk, William Kribley, placed the appeal in the hands of Mrs. Pink's attorney, Francis Gariepy, and suggested that the company guarantee payment of the alimony.

Gariepy reported that the company had agreed to see that the arrearage is paid, and the judge signed an order for Pink's immediate release.

OPA Closes Gasoline Station of Mother Aiding Service Son

Washington, D. C., April 21 [Special].—An instance of tyranny by New Jersey agents of the office of price administration—described even by an OPA official as incredible—was brought to light today and excoriated by Rep. Wolverton [R., N. J.], at a meeting of a subcommittee of the house committee on interstate commerce.

The OPA official, Shad Polier, after first declaring the facts to be beyond belief, later told the committee they were indeed true; that they had been shown to be so by an office investigation. Polier is in charge of gasoline regulation enforcement in New Jersey. He had been summoned before the subcommittee to give details of the OPA's effort to wipe out the black market in gasoline.

The case involved Mrs. Margaret A. Brockmeyer and her husband, who have been trying to get along by operating their son's gasoline filling station in Collingswood, N. J., while he is in military service. Mrs. Brockmeyer was forced to close the station from Dec. 20 to Jan. 5 because OPA enforcement agents found seven counterfeit ration stamps among the hundreds she turned in.

Forced to Sign Paper.

Wolverton said she had been forced also to sign a paper stating OPA had the power to shut down the station for three months.

"To have this couple branded as criminals for accepting seven coupons, when they had no idea the coupons were fraudulent, is an outrage," the congressman said.

Polier said he did not condone such punishment, but that the Brockmeyers had consented to imposition of the penalty. At this Wolverton bristled.

Bewildered by Officials.

"You summoned the poor old lady to an OPA headquarters," he said, "where she was bewildered by an array of officials and threatened with three months suspension. She had no lawyer to represent her, no one to speak in her defense. Of course she was glad to sign a consent ruling when you, with a show of consideration, told her you would suspend her business only for two weeks provided she signed a paper giving you the right to keep her from doing business for three months."

Wolverton said it was a pity the OPA couldn't concentrate on gangsters who were in the wholesale black market, and murdering each other over the racket, instead of prosecuting the small and innocent station owners.

About Price Control!

Some 1,000 members of the Chicago Better Business bureau will pay $4.75 a plate next Tuesday night for the privilege of dining at the bureau's annual meeting in the Palmer House and hearing Chester Bowles, the office of price administration czar, discuss "Price Control."

"The per plate cost is the same as a year ago, when we heard Donald Gordon tell how price control has worked in Canada," said Kenneth Barnard, general manager of the bureau.

New York, April 21 [Special].—The national office of price administration has purchased digests and analyses of its own regulations from a company that makes a specialty of simplifying administrative regulations for business men. A representative of the Research Institute of America disclosed today the OPA had bought 8,000 copies of the institute's "Price Control Analysis" for use as a working manual.

Income Levy Simplification Plan Proposed

Washington, D. C., April 21 (AP).—Details of new withholding levies against wages and salaries, which may become effective next Jan. 1 if congress approves the tax simplification bill now being shaped by the house ways and means committee, were disclosed tonight by a dependable tax source.

The new withholding levies, higher for most taxpayers, are designed to collect the full income tax liability of persons earning up to $5,000 and make it unnecessary for some 30 million persons to file formal returns after this year.

Other Forms Permitted.

However, any of the 30 million who desired to claim higher deductions for other taxes, contributions, and interest paid than the average allowed for the withholding machinery could file formal returns as usual, and make such claims.

There would be no change in amounts held out of pay envelopes and salary checks this year. The new withholdings would be designed to take the full tax for most persons, at about the levels of the new revenue law recently approved by congress.

The committee probably will decide tomorrow whether to accept the withholding tables prepared by its staff of experts.

Some Typical Examples.

Under the new withholding system, by which the government for the first time would attempt to collect exact tax liabilities by deduction from pay envelopes and salary checks, this is how a few average taxpayers would be affected:

A married man with one child earning $25 weekly—a withholding of 40 cents weekly. If he were single his withholding would be $3.10; married, without children, $1.10.

A $50 a week man, married, with one child—$4.40 weekly. If he were single his withholding would be $8.20; married, without children, $6.30; if he had two children, $2.50; three children, $1.10.

A $75 a week man, married, with one child—$9.50 weekly; if single his withholding would be $13.70; married, without children, $11.60; if he had two children, $7.50; three children, $5.60.

A $100 a week man, married, with one child—a withholding of $15.70 weekly. If single his withholding would be $19.90; married, without children, $17.50; if he had two children, $13.50; three children, $11.40.

The simplification bill, as now drawn, would put withholding on a graduated basis calculated to take the whole tax on incomes up to $5,000. To do this, the ways and means committee proposes to allow a flat 10 per cent deduction in arriving at the tax base, in lieu of the present deductions for other taxes paid, contributions, and interest paid.

GEN. PATTON ARRIVES IN BRITAIN FOR DUTY ON INVASION STAFF

LONDON, April 21 (AP).—Lt. Gen. George S. Patton Jr., tough tank specialist whose American 7th army swiftly overran most of Sicily, has arrived in Britain to take a place among Gen. Eisenhower's chief lieutenants for the invasion of western Europe.

Out of the public eye since the soldier slapping incident which almost wrecked his military career last year, Patton is known to the Germans as a rough-and-ready foe. To his troops the general is known as "the general who never lost a battle."

Patton arrived recently in a natty uniform, including a new battle jacket, and the censors permitted disclosures of his presence only tonight. The reunion of Patton with his victorious chief in the North African and Sicilian campaigns, Gen. Eisenhower, was taken as recognition by Eisenhower of Patton's abilities.

Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley is the senior commander of American ground forces marshaled in Britain for the invasion. During the Sicily campaign Bradley was one of Patton's corps commanders in the 7th army.

EXAMINE PLEAS IN LONDON FOR DOMESTIC HELP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 21.—Panels of women sat at London labor exchanges for the first time today to consider applications by householders for domestic help.

More than 2,000 London householders have requested servants from the labor exchanges, which will try to supply them from women drafted for domestic service under the national service act. There are said to be fewer than 500 women on the rolls who are available for this type of work.

Applicants are required to answer many questions, such as the size of the house and laundry arrangements.

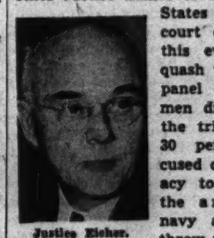
SEDITION TRIAL JUROR PANEL TO BE QUASHED

Judge Acts After U.S. Aid's Error.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 21. — Chief Justice Eicher of the United States District court decided this evening to quash the entire panel of veniremen drawn for the trial of the 30 persons accused of conspiracy to disaffect the army and navy and overthrow the American form of government.



Justice Eicher.

He decided to take this action because of an error prejudicial to a fair trial for the defendants committed by O. John Rogge, the government prosecutor, during the session of court yesterday.

Rogge, in stating his reasons for demanding new bonds of the defendants under the indictment in the case being tried, mentioned the two previous indictments of 23 of the 30 persons accused. These first two indictments were largely invalidated by the courts but the government is still holding them over the heads of the accused.

Lawyers Quick to Object.

The mention of the two previous indictments was prejudicial to a fair trial of the defendants under the third indictment because it tended to discredit the accused in the eyes of the prospective jurors. It was a particular injustice to the eight defendants who were not named in the first two indictments.

Rogge no sooner had committed the error than numerous defense counsel were on their feet moving for disqualification and dismissal of the panel of 130 veniremen drawn for this case, or at least the 70 odd talesmen then in the chamber, on the ground that Rogge's statement was bound to prejudice prospective jurors against the defendants. The court overruled the oral motions at the time.

After considering the matter today Justice Eicher decided that the ground of a prejudicial utterance was well taken and notified counsel that when the trial resumes Monday morning he will enter the order disqualifying the panel and call for a new panel of 130 veniremen.

Motion by Kunze.

Justice Eicher decided to take this action after receiving a written motion filed in his court this morning by one of the eight defendants named in the third but not in the first two indictments—Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze, leader of the German-American bund, now serving a 15 year sentence for espionage.

Kunze asked the justice to disqualify and dismiss either the entire jury panel or those veniremen who were in the courtroom when Rogge mentioned the first two indictments. Kunze said the prejudicial error was magnified by the fact that he "never was a party to the two other indictments."

Kunze also said that equally prejudicial to the interests of himself and other defendants was any exclamation made yesterday by Defendant Edward James Smythe, New York agitator, in the hearing of the prospective jurors. The exclamation was uttered when Justice Eicher, in reading the statute, was understood generally to have said the 30 were accused of inciting "insurrection" instead of inciting "insubordination" of the military services as stated in the 1940 sedition law.

"You have already convicted us in the minds of the jury with that statement you made," shouted Smythe to the judge.

Denies Use of Word.

Kunze said this remark was prejudicial to himself and other defendants "who neither condoned or were a party" to it. Justice Eicher later stated that he did not use the term "insurrection" or, if he did, he withdrew it.

When Justice Eicher reached his decision to quash the panel and start afresh with the selection of the jury he called in Rogge and his assistant, Joseph W. Burns, and E. Hilton Jackson, dean of the defense counsel, who represents Gerald B. Winrod, a Kansas pamphleteer. The judge discussed the matter at length with these lawyers and during the conversation gave it as his opinion that Rogge had committed a fatal error, one that was bound to prejudice the prospective jurors against the defendants and bound to lead to a reversal of the conviction by the higher courts if a conviction should be obtained.

Defense counsel generally hailed the judge's decision as a vindication of their contentions repeatedly voiced in the trial that the government was resorting to unfair tactics in an effort to railroad their clients to conviction.

James J. Laughlin, attorney for Smythe and Robert Noble of Los Angeles, already serving a five year sentence for violation of the California sedition act, said tonight he will file a motion Monday to impound the records of the B'nai B'rith, the Jewish Anti-Defamation league, the Nonsectarian Anti-Nazi society, the Friends of Democracy, and the Communist party. These records are wanted, he said, in connection with the defense as bearing upon the genesis of the pending prosecution.

Safeguard of Rights.

Laughlin said also his move is related to allegations that one or more of these organizations caused spies to be placed in the headquarters of Gen. Douglas MacArthur for the purpose of smearing him by linking him with the person accused of disloyalty in this case.

Earlier in the day Laughlin petitioned the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for a writ of mandamus to Justice Eicher to stay the proceedings until the rights of the defendants are safeguarded.

Laughlin stated in his petition that he was taking this unusual action because his clients' "constitutional guarantees are being frittered away." In support of this contention the lawyer stated that Justice Eicher has allowed the 30 defendants only 10 peremptory challenges of veniremen, which "would amount to one-third of a challenge for each defendant." He called attention of the court to its own opinion that "a statute in a criminal case must be given a sensible construction."

The attorney also charged that "there has been unjustified wiretapping and the shadowing of various defendants and alleged tampering with prospective jurors" and that Justice Eicher has refused to investigate the extent of "such irregularities and violation of constitutional rights."

Constitutional Protection.

Laughlin further asserted that Justice Eicher, in assuming the function of examining prospective jurors and not permitting counsel to question them, had been violating "constitutional protection as to a fair and impartial trial." He also said that Justice Eicher is rejecting motions without full consideration and without giving counsel an opportunity to be heard.

In an amendment to the petition filed later, Laughlin cited as additional grounds the refusal of Justice Eicher in a collateral proceeding today to permit Rogge, the government prosecutor, to be questioned as a witness regarding circumstances pertaining to the notification of Smythe of the trial date. Also challenged as irregular was the judge's forfeiture of the bond given by Smythe, not in this case, in which he gave none, but under the two previous indictments. The department of justice had allowed bonds previously given to be applied to the third indictment.

The session in Justice Eicher's court today was confined to the question whether Smythe was fleeing from justice when apprehended by the federal bureau of investigation at Ausable Forks, N. Y., the day after the trial started.

Ruled Out of Order.

Smythe denied telling FBI Agent B. L. Johnson that he had seen in the papers that the trial would start April 17.

"Did the FBI agents handcuff you?" asked Laughlin.

"No, let me tell you," shouted Smythe, "if they had tried to put handcuffs on me in this political prosecution——"

Government counsel objected and the judge ruled the witness out of order. Smythe said he played cards with the four FBI agents on the train to Washington and that he asked them why they had been sent after him this time. According to Smythe one of the agents said:

"Did they say who put the heat on?" asked Laughlin.

"No," answered Smythe.

Frequent Clashes.

"I had a fishing hat on," said Smythe, "that would not cast shadows while I was fly fishing. Is there anything unusual in that?"

Laughlin sought persistently to get Rogge on the witness stand to testify concerning defense bond arrangements and his knowledge of the whereabouts of Smythe, but the justice upheld government counsel's contentions that such testimony would be irrelevant. There were frequent clashes between Justice Eicher and Laughlin, in one of which the justice gavelled the attorney into silence. Laughlin objected to the treatment, was overruled and asked that an exception to the ruling be noted in the record.

"Exception denied," snapped the justice.

Justice Eicher refused to revoke his previous order forfeiting Smythe's $1,000 bond under the indictments but continued the hearing on the question whether Smythe deliberately fled the trial. Smythe now is in jail, having failed to make the $10,000 new bond fixed by the court Wednesday.

U. S. Seizure of Ward's Plant Urged in White House Parley

Washington, D. C., April 22 [Special].—The administration's troubles with Montgomery Ward & Co. today appeared to be on the way toward "solution" by way of a plan to have Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation and secretary of commerce, take the company over for the government. Such action would be unprecedented.

There was, however, no official statement to this effect, and all that could be learned on the highest authority was that a plea for such action was given the most serious consideration in White House talks. Moreover, it had been discussed at the cabinet level even before the White House meetings.

Case Before President.

The purpose of the scheme is to get around the nonwar contract aspect of the Montgomery Ward noncompliance case, which would seem to preclude resort to the device customary with defiant war contractors of having the war or navy departments take over operations.

The $30,000,000 mail order and retail chain concern refused to comply with an order of the national war labor board and on April 13, after the United Mail Order, Warehouse and Retail Employes union [CIO] called a strike in an effort to force company compliance, the NWLB sent the case to the White House.

Customarily, when cases of noncompliance involving war contractors have been sent to the White House, President Roosevelt has ordered either the war or navy departments to take over the companies involved. But, an important point in Ward's defense against the government's actions has been that it is not making products of military importance.

Garrison, Byrnes Confer.

Lloyd K. Garrison, a public member of the NWLB, who also is its compliance officer, spent a long time this morning in the White House office of James F. Byrnes, director of war mobilization. It was reported Garrison urged action directing Secretary Jones to take over the company. Atty. Gen. Francis Biddle also was reported present.

It was learned on excellent authority that one of those present made the point that it would be rather foolish, politically, to put Jesse Jones into competition with all the retail merchants of the country in a Presidential election year.

Other information suggested that Byrnes did not appear friendly to the idea.

However, informed sources at the NWLB denied that the proposals submitted had received cool treatment at the Byrnes office. These sources indicated that action in the Ward's case might be expected soon.

Visits White House Again.

Garrison returned to the NWLB offices in the labor building and discussed the conference with Chairman William H. Davis. Late in the afternoon he returned to the White House, taking Davis with him.

NWLB officials stressed the importance of the precedent involved in the case, taking the position that should the Chicago mail order company succeed in "flouting" a board order, the board might just as well go out of business.

An industry member pointed out that industry members, even tho they have voted as a minority in certain cases, have supported the majority opinion once it became the official ruling of the board. If they did not do that, said this member, they would serve no purpose on the board.

James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO, issued a statement here in which he called for "immediate government action" against the company.

Union Authority Challenged.

"It is the company that has gone on strike, not its employes," he said. "Montgomery Ward has brazenly flouted government authority to decide war labor disputes. It is striking against the government."

The company has taken the position that the NWLB "illegally" ordered it to extend an expired contract, but it has also said that it "stands ready to recognize the union when proof of its representation has been presented." Such proof, the company contends, has not been forthcoming despite challenges of the union's claim that it still has a majority among employes.

Mail Plea Made

Montgomery Ward & Co. demanded yesterday that Ernest J. Kruetgen, Chicago postmaster, return 71 postal employes to clear mail and parcel post in the mail order house at 620 Chicago av., resuming a 30 year service that was interrupted after a CIO union of company employes went on strike April 12.

"Your reported statement that your employes were withdrawn because they 'had no work to do' is disproved by the quantity of shipments sacked by Ward's own employes," the company wrote. A demand also was made that Kruetgen deliver first class mail to the firm.

Milwaukee railroad employes in office clothing, obviously not trainmen, moved six loaded cars from the Ward plant siding yesterday. The striking union challenged the company's statement that nearly 70 per cent of the mail order department's workers were on the job, and declared some 85 per cent were on strike. Two men and a woman in the picket line were arrested for molesting employes leaving the Ward building.

STUDY CANADA'S LABOR CODE IN FORD STOPPAGE

WINDSOR, Ont., April 21 (AP).—Federal conciliation officers, under instructions from the Canadian war time labor relations board, late today went into conference to decide a method of approach to problems of settling a dispute at the Ford Motor Company of Canada plant here which has left more than 14,000 employes idle since yesterday.

J. S. McCullough, senior conciliator of the board, arrived by plane from Ottawa this afternoon and immediately went into conference with F. J. Ainsborough, another department officer who arrived yesterday. McCullough said he was "just getting the story."

Meanwhile picket lines were being maintained by strikers, most of whom are members of local 200 of the United Automobile Workers.

AFL BARGAINING SWAYS GAR-WOOD MEN TO RETURN

The regional labor relations board reported yesterday that the AFL Auto Mechanics' union, local 701, had been certified as the bargaining agent for workers of the Gar-Wood Industries plant at 301 W. 37th st. As a result, 40 striking employes, who began to walk out on their jobs Wednesday, voted to return to work this morning. The company assembles special hoists used by the chemical branch of the army.

FIGHTS OUSTER FROM HIS OWN PLANT BY ARMY

BY THOMAS FURLONG.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Owensboro, Ky., April 21.—Fired by the New Deal from the manufacturing business he has owned and operated for 27 years, Roy Burlew today awaited a federal court hearing on his suit that is expected to bring the first genuine legal test of the powers of the war labor board.

Burlew's company is the Ken-Rad Lamp and Tube corporation, which he started from scratch in 1917 and is today one of the largest industrial enterprises in the state, employing 4,000 workers here.

A week ago the war department, on instructions from President Roosevelt, took possession of the plant, fired Burlew and his principal executives and took complete charge of the production of radio tubes which the company has been turning out for the army and navy.

Seized with Military Flourish.

The occupation of the plant was carried out with a military flourish. Army trucks containing 45 officers, enlisted men, and WACs entered the plant at 4 p. m. last Friday. Soldiers took stations at all entrances to the plant.

Col. Carroll Badeau, in charge of the party, and a group of officers entered the president's office, where Col. Badeau read to Burlew the Presidential order directing the army to seize the plant.

The plant's occupation by the army, Burlew explained today, gave him his first opportunity to bring into court his two year old row with the labor board.

Balks at Pay Increases.

The plant seizure followed Burlew's refusal to accede to a WLB order issued March 31 directing the company to raise its minimum wage rate from 40 to 50 cents and grant increases of 3 cents an hour to workers making more than the minimum. The increases were to apply retroactively to Aug. 13, 1942, requiring payment of about 1¼ million dollars in back wages, a sum which officials said could not be paid without borrowing by the company.

The demand for the wage increase was initiated by AFL United Automobile Workers, designated by the labor board as bargaining agent.

Burlew said today he was willing to grant a wage increase but he objects to the board's order on several points. His main objection is that the company cannot afford to pay the scale the board directed. Furthermore, he said, the board's order would benefit chiefly the unskilled workers, mostly women and girls, who do not qualify for the 50 cent rate at present until their piece work production rate warrants it. Under the board's order they would qualify for a higher rate automatically after working 45 days, regardless of their production rate.

Company Denied Hearing.

The board ruled that Ken-Rad's minimum rate was substandard for the area, a point on which the company was denied a hearing, Burlew said. It is on this point that Burlew has taken the case to court. Last Saturday the company's attorneys filed a complaint in the federal district court at Louisville, naming Col. Badeau as defendant and charging that the WLB order and subsequent seizure of the plant were illegal because of the board's unlawful assumption of the existence of substandard wages.

A hearing is scheduled next Wednesday in Louisville before Judge Max Swinford on the company's complaint which asks an order enjoining Badeau from holding and operating the plant and putting into effect the WLB wage order.

Plans Fight to Finish.

It is Burlew's contention that the WLB has been operating since its appointment without legal authority to exercise the wide powers it has assumed over industry. Heretofore, he says, industry has been unable to challenge the board in court because there was no legal basis for a suit.

Burlew is determined to carry his fight to the finish. "If we lose the first round Wednesday we will take an appeal and carry the case to the Supreme court, if necessary," he said.

Jewelry Dispute

Judge William V. Daly in Felony court yesterday continued until April 26 hearing on a charge against Thomas Lane, 56, an ex-convict, that he fleeced a widow of jewelry valued at $550 a year ago. Lane, who asserted he is the victim of mistaken identity, agreed to submit to a lie detector test. In court yesterday, the widow, Mrs. Lourette Gillette, 610 Wellington av., and her two daughters, identified Lane, a machine shop superintendent. Lane lives at 8818 Michigan av.

NEW ARMY-NAVY PLEA FOR LABOR DRAFT REJECTED

Washington, D. C., April 21 (AP).—The house military committee stood firm today in opposition to labor draft legislation in the face of a renewed drive by the army, navy, and maritime commission for a law to conscript war plant workers.

If anything, the latest plea of the military services, as expressed in a joint statement by Navy Secretary Knox, War Secretary Stimson, and Maritime Chairman Land, solidified the oft-voiced position of the committee that national service legislation is not the answer to the man power problem.

"We have spoken and we meant what we said," declared Rep. May [D., Ky.], chairman of the committee without whose sanction service legislation cannot reach the house floor. National service legislation has been stalled for months in his committee and in the senate's military committee.

Existing Law Held Sufficient.

May referred to a committee report, issued yesterday five hours before the army-navy-maritime statement, asserting there is no need for legislation and pointing out that existing law permits selective service and other war agencies to control the job activities of draft age men, especially 4-F's.

The report mildly criticized the army for what the committee said was a lack of full coöperation in efficiently using man power under present laws.

Even the relatively few committee members who have insisted on consideration of national service legislation conceded there is no chance for action unless committee sentiment changes drastically.

Shortage Is Denied.

The foreboding picture of the nation's man power situation painted by the army-navy-maritime heads drew from Rep. Harness [R., Ind.], a committee member, the assertion the problem is not one of man power but of proper handling of man power now available.

The increasing number of persons applying for unemployment compensation, and the reduction of industrial man power needs resulting from cutbacks in production, Harness said, "makes it apparent that the problem is not one of finding men but of getting the available men into jobs.

"What we need is a little coöperation between the government agencies, not new legislation," he added.

The military service heads said 1,400,000 men will be inducted this year, most of them from war plant jobs. The military committee feels the vacancies could be filled by 4-F's and ex-service men.

SENATORS PROBE EXCESS BUYING BY ARMY, NAVY

Greater Production of Civilian Goods Sought.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 21.—The senate Truman committee is investigating excessive purchases by the army and navy, it was learned today. A main objective is to stimulate production of civilian goods.

Hugh Fulton, attorney for the committee, as part of this inquiry, has been instructed to ask the war production board to rescind an order of two weeks ago which has been interpreted as an unnecessary restraint on manufacturing. This order as applied to labor shortage areas limits individual manufacturers from making more civilian goods than they did in the first quarter of 1943.

"This plainly violates previous committee recommendations," said Fulton.

Example Is Cited.

A hypothetical example was cited of a factory which needed its 400 men for a war contract that required only a third of the plant capacity. While executing the war contract, the plant also could make civilian goods with no additional labor requirement, but it would be prohibited from so doing under the recent WPB order.

In other instances, there are small plants that have completed war contracts. An army procurement officer told Truman committee investigators that such plants should be forced to close so that employes could go to work in other factories making military goods. The senators oppose this theory, charging it constitutes condemnation of plant facilities without due compensation to the owners, and that it deprives civilians of goods which might be made by available labor, available material, and available equipment.

The committee has compiled evidence indicating the army and navy have purchased arms, trucks, transport planes, food, and clothing in excess of reasonably anticipated requirements, one of the congressional investigators said.

Criticism for Extravagances.

"The procurement divisions know they are overstocked," he said, "but they are waiting for the opening of the second front as a psychological time to reduce their orders with a minimum of criticism for their extravagance. Actually, the second front won't be fought with goods now on order, but with material already manufactured and delivered overseas."

The exact amount of military equipment now in Great Britain is, obviously, a military secret, but it is common knowledge in the capital that the quantities are prodigious. The closing of multi-million dollar munition factories in recent months substantiates reports of some excesses.

Shoes have been cited as an example of overbuying by the military. The orders have admittedly been 45 per cent greater than anticipated requirements.

Warehouses Bulging.

On food, the Truman committee is looking into the justification of allocating 30 per cent of the canned goods to the considerably smaller portion of the population in uniform. Warehouses are bulging and more are being built.

As a result of the Truman committee inquiry, army and navy truck orders have been cut 125,000 but the senators still are curious. They have found, it was said, that 700,000 or 800,000 vehicles are used for an average of no more than 10 miles a day.

On transport planes, reports reaching the investigators have been denied. It has been said, however, that the transport planes assigned to American stations, some for the personal use of big shots in the army and navy, average 2½ hours flying a day. In contrast, the commercial air lines, which could use these transports, are operating planes for an average of 12 hours a day.

7 BOY INMATES ESCAPE STATE TRAINING SCHOOL

Seven inmates slipped from their seats in the darkened movie auditorium of the Illinois State Training School for Boys, near St. Charles, last night and jumped the high steel fence of the grounds to freedom.

State police and local authorities were immediately notified by Richard Eddy, school superintendent. Melvin Philbrick, assistant superintendent, said none of the fugitives is considered dangerous. All were wearing school attire of denim pants and blue striped shirts. The seven made their getaway from the theater when attendants left the theater with a boy who had become ill. About 500 boys were in the auditorium at the time.

Those who escaped, their home addresses, and their offenses, were: James Craver, 16, 6830 Peoria st., auto theft; Anthony Durkin, 16, 4918 Princeton av., bicycle theft; Richard Adamczyk, 13, 7043 S. Justine st., burglary, and George Baumgartner, 15, 2107 Argyle st., burglary, all of Chicago; Howard Gaines, 14, Sullivan, burglary; Calvin Hoskins, 18, Kankakee, auto theft, and James Yates, 15, Marion, larceny.

UNION APPROVES FACTORY USE OF WAR PRISONERS

Civilian Goods Output to Be Resumed.

South Bend, Ind., April 21 [Special].—Conversion of the facilities of the Oliver Farm Equipment company of South Bend from war work to civilian production at 100 per cent of capacity was brought closer today when the St. Joseph county industrial council [CIO] approved the proposed employment of 400 war prisoners.

It was reported that the company, which already employs 2,000 men and women, is winding up its production of shell casings, but is falling behind on its commitments for farm machinery.

Approval Limited.

The union council's investigating committee asserted that this reported lag was true even tho the present employes are working 12 to 14 hours a day.

Its approval of prisoner labor was qualified by a provision that the prisoners will be taken off their jobs as soon as free labor becomes available. South Bend at present is in a critical labor shortage area.

The request for the prisoners will be made by company officials and the war man power commission. The company plans to house them in buildings formerly used by the national youth administration.

Heavy Farm Contracts.

Oliver manufactures plows, reapers, binders, and other farm machinery. Its present schedule calls for 100 per cent capacity production of such implements by July 1.

Company officials report that the war production board has released enough steel and other materials to carry out the assigned jobs.

BEST AND MOST, NELSON PLEDGES INVASION ARMY

When the great invasion of Europe begins, American troops will have the finest war materials of all types in the greatest quantities the world ever has seen to match their courage and discipline, Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the war production board, said last night. He spoke before 1,500 members of the Chicago Association of Commerce and guests in the Stevens hotel.

"No nation or combination of nations in history has assembled an invasion armada equal to ours either in size or engineering and construction," he asserted. "We have already produced 20,000 vessels, and when the present program is completed, our armed forces will have 80,000 landing craft at their disposal, with 15 special types to perform every conceivable duty of amphibious warfare."

Praises Chicago Production.

Nelson, telling the audience that the war is far from won, said he came to Chicago to give a personal account of the nation's war program. He declared that every Chicagoan should be proud of the remarkable record of the city in producing for war—a record that has been outstanding in the nation.

"As our landing craft speed toward the greatest battle in history, overhead will fly an enormous air shield of white starred American planes—the best in the world. No flying ships developed by the enemy have their speed, fire power, bomb load, range, and maneuverability, and they are being constantly improved.

"Our light bombers, fighter bombers, and fighters not only have caught up with the advanced German production, but have surpassed it in a variety of specific types. We are producing unmatched all around planes for escort, strafing, combat, and bombing."

Best Ordnance in World.

Nelson said that the quality of the nation's ordnance is outstanding. The .50 caliber aircraft machine gun is almost certainly the best gun made for airplanes to date. The Garand rifle gives our infantry a big advantage over our enemies. The 105 millimeter howitzer has been described as the best piece of light artillery in the world, he said. In a recent campaign two batteries fired nearly 8,000 rounds during 24 hours, which meant that the gun had to be close to engineering perfection.

Nelson did not paint a rosy picture of future civilian production. He said that post-war planning largely will have to wait until we get closer to victory.

G. O. P. OFFICIALS MOVE TO SOLVE CICERO'S TANGLE

Cicero still had two sets of town officers as the town board tried yesterday for the sixth time to settle the conflict between the Republican majority of trustees and the Democratic president over appointive authority. Another meeting was set for next Monday night.

The Republicans, however, yielded a little yesterday in agreeding that some of the 121 employes ordered dismissed should be retained. They restored Max West, who has been juvenile officer for 23 years; also Dr. O. T. Chrt, welfare center dentist, and nine school crossing patrolmen.

Officers named by President Henry J. Sandusky, who contends he has authority under the cities and villages act, continued to hold their titles and so did those appointed by the Republican trustees, who insist the town's charter gives them the power to appoint.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 21.—A Republican protest over New Deal strategy in keeping Sen. Bone [D., Wash.] in the senate after he had been confirmed as a federal judge gave Democratic senators an uncomfortable half hour today. Majority Leader Barkley [D., Ky.] offered a defense of Bone after Minority Leader White [R., Me.] had called the senate's attention to rumors that Bone means to retain his seat until the November elections to prevent the appointment of a Republican as his successor.

Bone, now in the naval hospital at Bethesda, Md., for treatment of a leg injury, was appointed by President Roosevelt on April 1 to the bench of the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals at San Francisco, Cal.

Auxiliary Cop Pal Shot Is in a Serious Condition

Rudolph Cortus, 31, of 1446 Gunderson av., Berwyn, was in serious condition yesterday with a bullet wound below the heart as a result of an accident Thursday night on a shooting range at 3238 Oak Park av., Berwyn. He and three other members of the Berwyn auxiliary police had just finished cleaning their revolvers when the weapon held by Frank Shrosbree, 35, of 3123 Oak Park av., was discharged accidentally. Cortus was taken to the MacNeal Memorial hospital in the suburb.

ELEANOR STEBER TO SING ANTONIA IN AIR THEATER

Eleanor Steber, young American soprano who will sing the part of Antonia in the Metropolitan Opera company's presentation of "Tales of Hoffmann" in the Civic Opera house next Wednesday, will take the same part in the Chicago Theater of the Air broadcast of the Offenbach opera tonight in Medinah temple.

Miss Steber is taking the place of Marion Claire, who is ill. Miss Steber also will sing the role of Juliet. Miss Claire had been scheduled to take both parts. A full page color picture of Miss Steber will appear on Page One, Part Six of the Tribune tomorrow.

Col. McCormick Speaks.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Tribune, will speak during the broadcast, which will run from 8 to 9 p. m. on W-G-N, WGNB and the Mutual network.

Gilbert Russell, tenor, will be heard as Hoffmann; Bruce Foote, baritone, as Dr. Miracle, and Ruth Slater, contralto, as Antonia's mother. The W-G-N Symphony orchestra and chorus will be directed by Henry Weber. Tonight's broadcast will be dedicated to SPAR recruiting and will be held under auspices of the treasury department in the interest of war bond sales. Walter Painter will speak after the broadcast.

Mayor Participates.

More than 3,000 SPARS and prospective SPARS will be guests at the broadcast and an hour long program of nonbroadcast entertainment to be given by the coast guard after the radio show. Mayor Kelly is expected to take part in the postbroadcast program. He is to accept in behalf of the city the first coast guard citation of merit for the success of the recruiting drive. Ensign Carolyn Wolfs, assistant SPAR recruiting officer, will present the citation.

The entertainers will include the Coast Guard Cutters, instrumental trio, and Bea Wain, radio songstress. Olan Soule, member of the cast and a coast guard reservist, will interview Coast Guardsman Charles Giamono, a veteran of Sicily and Salerno. He was sprayed with shrapnel and physicians have removed more than 300 pieces of metal from his body.

After completing 150 hours, they are eligible to work in army hospitals. Applications for the corps are being taken at Red Cross headquarters.

WJJD STRIKERS ORDERED TO GO BACK BY GREEN

The strike of 10 union record turners in the WJJD radio studios at 230 N. Michigan av. is a violation of labor's "no strike" pledge, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and the national war labor board declared in a telegram yesterday.

Ralph Atlass, president of WJJD, said Green sent him a message that the strike is a violation of the pledge which cannot be approved by the A. F. of L. The WLB message was addressed to Edward Benkert, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, and directed him to request the striking federation members at WJJD to return to work immediately.

The 10 were taken off their jobs April 14 when the company refused to meet a union demand to hire 20 men to do the work, which is being handled by girls during the strike.

BOX SHORTAGE DELAYS PACKING OF ARMY MEALS

2 WPB Chiefs Accused of Causing Crisis.

Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the war production board, promised last night immediate investigation of complaints that two of his subordinates are responsible for a paper pulp shortage so critical as to imperil issuance of army field rations because of a lack of cardboard boxes and waterproof wax paper in which to pack them. Nelson made the promise in talking with reporters in the Stevens hotel.

Packing of concentrated meals for battle front consumption several times recently has been reported to have been threatened with shutdowns for lack of containers. It was said the board mills on which the box factories depend for supplies have been hampered by late delivery of pulp.

In the face of a projected invasion of the European continent, a possible shortage of field rations was looked upon as extremely serious.

Boeschenstein and Otto Named.

Paper, cardboard, and boxboard producers thruout the country are said to be aroused because the ceiling price on waste paper remains at $15 a ton. That ceiling was fixed in October, 1941, long before any shortage had developed. Mr. Nelson said it had been reported to him that Harold Boeschenstein, director of the forest products bureau of the WPB, and G. C. Otto, director of the paperboard division of the agency, were responsible for holding the ceiling price at this level.

"These reports were made to me only the day before yesterday," Mr. Nelson said. "I can assure you an immediate inquiry will be made and whatever is wrong will be righted."

In response to a question, the WPB chairman said he had been told Boeschenstein and Otto have refused to recommend an increase of $10 a ton for the waste paper altho it has been urged by Herbert Mr. Faust, director of WPB's salvage division.

OPA Ready to Act.

The office of price administration, which would have to act to increase the waste paper price, told Paul White, chairman of the national waste paper committee, that it must have the recommendation of Boeschenstein and Otto to lift the ceiling. OPA officials have said that, altho they have been ready for six months to boost the price from the $15 fixed in 1941 to the $25 demanded, they have been unable to obtain the recommendation from Boeschenstein and Otto.

John Brossard of the Container corporation, Norman Greenway of the Gair corporation, and Herbert Cherry, president of the Central Fiber company, three of the largest producers of paperboard, are reported to have told Washington officials vainly that 75 per cent of the mill owners who would have to pay the increased price for waste paper are eager to see the price raised.

These producers are said to be insistent they believe a large amount of still hidden waste would be brought to light by such an incentive.

Report Black Market in Paper.

A tremendous black market in waste paper is reported to be complicating the situation. Involved, it was stated, is the fact that millions of school children all over the country were enrolled in the recent waste paper salvage drives in which tons of paper was gathered, but for which the children often were not paid.

Mr. Nelson remarked that he would favor lifting the ceiling to $25 a ton, "provided the question of where the increase goes were satisfactorily answered."

Before becoming head of the WPB forest products division, Boeschenstein was president of the Owens-Corning Fibre Glass corporation, a subsidiary of the Owens-Illinois Glass company, largest purchaser of boxboard [with which it manufactures its own boxes] in the country. He also is a director of the National Distillers Products company.

8 Million Tons Needed.

Pre-war consumption of waste paper was approximately 4½ million tons a year. In 1943, more than 6 million tons were consumed. This year the goal fixed by the WPB for collection of waste paper is 8 million tons.

The army is asserted to be several million shell containers short, and mills are reported to be 30 days behind in supplying waterproofed military and naval containers.

YANKS GO ON AIR TOMORROW FROM JJRP AT ANZIO

ANZIO BEACHHEAD IN ITALY, April 21 (AP).—The toughest little radio station in the world—JJRP—goes on the air Sunday with its first program from Anzio beachhead to the folks back home, 4,400 miles away.

From the bombed and shelled ruins along the coast, JJRP has been in operation since D-day, Jan. 22, but this will be its initial attempt to beam the voices of America's fighting men to the United States.

The station's only studio and transmitter are located in a sagging structure known as Villa Vice. Despite two casualties among its personnel, Lt. James O. H. Holmlund, of Bangor, Wis., and his crew of 5th army signalmen have kept the station operating.

Sunday's voicecast will include soldier interviews and spot news reports. London will pick up the program for British listeners.

STEAL TIRES, OIL, PHONE COINS.

Six automobile tires, 20 gallons of motor oil, and a telephone coin box were taken by burglars from the filling station at 5101 S. Western av., Stanley Janos, the manager, reported to police yesterday.

BATTLE SPREADS IN POLAND; REDS KILL 1,500 NAZIS

Claim Russians Move Up Reserves.

LONDON, April 22 [Saturday]—(AP).—The soviet high command announced early today that Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's 1st Ukraine army killed 1,500 enemy troops and destroyed 68 tanks yesterday in a violent battle spreading thru the Carpathian foothills southeast of Stanislau in old Poland.

Moscow's midnight bulletin said the fighting was precipitated by renewed German attacks. One soviet unit alone repulsed seven Nazi assaults, often hand-to-hand, the bulletin said.

A Berlin broadcast reported that huge Red army reserves were flowing thru the Ukraine into a 250 mile sector of the Polish front between the upper Dniester river and the Pripyat river as a prelude to fresh Russian assaults along the most direct invasion route to Berlin.

May Have Shifted from Crimea.

It was possible that these Russian reserves had been shifted from the Crimea where Sevastopol is the only foothold left to the enemy. Two Russian armies under Generals Feodor I. Tolbukhin and Andrei I. Yeremenko had virtually finished the conquest of the Crimea in a lightning two week campaign. The midnight bulletin, however, made no mention of the besieged port.

The Russians insisted that the Nazis were beaten back. The German bulletin said that German and Hungarian troops had "gained further ground" southeast of Stanislau, and declared that the Hungarians had captured the village of Ottynia.

Hurl Big Force Into Valley.

A dispatch from a correspondent of the Russian army newspaper Red Star, said the Germans were using the flooded Prut and Dniester rivers to protect their flanks, hurling a great weight of men and machines down the intervening valley in an offensive apparently aimed at relieving soviet pressure on Lwow, big communications hub 65 miles northwest of Stanislau. German airmen also entered the action, the report said.

Dispatches from Moscow said that the battle of Sevastopol was in its final phase. Russians captured key positions in the Mount Sapoun valley four miles southeast of the city, these advices said, and artillerymen hurled shells into enemy troops trapped inside the city. Soviet naval airmen were said to have inflicted thousands of casualties on Nazis trying to escape across the Black sea to Rumania.

On the Estonian front, where the Russians on Thursday said troops killed 2,000 counter-attacking Germans southwest of Narva, the Moscow bulletin reported only long range bombing activity.

U. S. AND BRITAIN MASS INVASION FLEET—BERLIN

LONDON, April 21 (AP).—The Berlin radio said today the American and British navies were massing "the greatest concentration since Dunkirk" in British home waters for the western invasion.

"Troops are leaving London, which is becoming more and more deserted by British, American, and colonial troops," the broadcast said. "Every day now troop trains are leaving London stations, taking men to channel ports and to ports on the south and east coasts."

The Vichy radio, also broadcasting invasion rumors, said the main invasion blow from the west would be timed with new allied assaults in Italy and the Balkans.

BUCHAREST HIT IN BIG U.S. AIR RAID, NAZIS SAY

LONDON, April 21 (AP).—American heavy bombers were reported by Berlin to have carried out a "major attack" on Bucharest and other targets in southeastern Europe today.

[A German radio broadcast recorded by the British ministry of information warned early today of "enemy aircraft which approached western Germany," indicating the R. A. F. might be extending the allied day-night attack on Hitler's Europe.]

This blow presumably was from bases in Italy. Berlin said the Rumanian capital was raided at noon and that bombs also were dropped in Jugo-Slavia.

More than 300 American Marauder and Havoc bombers dropped upwards of 500 tons of explosives on northern France this afternoon. They fought thru heavy ground fire and a small number of enemy fighters. The fighters were the first put up in northern France in more than a month. Five bombers were lost.

A Focke-Wulf "as black as the ace of spades" came in to attack the Marauder in which Sgt. Donald J. Webber, 4521 Wilcox st., Chicago, flew as a tail gunner. "He came straight at me without weaving and started to go down smoking at 600 yards."

The R. A. F. in its strongest blow of the war poured more than 5,000 tons of bombs last night on Cologne, Germany, and three other key railway centers—Lens, France; Ottignies, Belgium, and La Chapelle on the outskirts of Paris. Sixteen bombers of the raiding force of more than 1,100 planes were lost.

BADOGLIO NAMES NEW CABINET; 6 PARTIES TO RULE

NAPLES, April 21 (AP).—Marshal Pietro Badoglio announced the formation of a new Italian cabinet today with himself as premier and foreign minister. He said the new government would begin functioning Monday.

"The allies wanted me to form a more representative government," Badoglio told correspondents. "All six of Italy's parties are represented in this one. Therefore, I feel the results could not have been better."

Asked if he thought the new cabinet would endure until the allies enter Rome, the marshal replied, "I'm no prophet."

The list of new members was submitted to King Victor Emmanuel after an agreement had been reached with the Actionist party, last of the holdouts.

Five Leaders Given Posts.

Five prominent Italian figures were made ministers without portfolio. They are Count Carlo Sforza, one-time foreign minister who led the anti-Fascist movement abroad; Benedetto Croce, aged philosopher and former senator; Pietro Mancini, Socialist; Guilio Rodino, leader of the Christian Democrats, and Palmiro Togliatti, Communist leader who spent many years in Russia under the name of Ercole Ercoli while attached to the third international.

It was Togliatti who took the lead in urging coöperation of all parties in the Badoglio government. He returned recently from a conference in Moscow.

Another Communist, Fausto Gullo, was made minister of agriculture, giving the party responsibility for one of the most difficult problems faced by the new government — amassing a wheat crap. The Communists had sought the ministry of interior, but this portfolio was given Salvatore Aldisio, a Christian Democrat and former deputy from Sicily.

Others in Cabinet.

Others heading ministries are: Gen. Taddeo Orlando, war; Adm. Raffaele de Courten, navy; Gen. Renato Sandalli, air; Quinto Quintieri, president of the Bank of Calabria, finance; Vincenzo Arangio-Ruiz, Liberal party leader, justice; Attilio Dinapolis, Socialist, labor; Francesco Cernaboni, Labor-Democracy, communications; Prof. Adolfo Omedeo, Actionist and rector of the University of Naples, public instruction; Alberto Tarchiani, Actionist, public works.

AMERICANS FLY 2,000 SORTIES TO RIP NAZI TARGETS IN ITALY

ALLIED HDQ., Naples, April 21 (AP).—The allied Mediterranean air forces hurled their striking power against Nazi communications in Italy yesterday, hitting, shipping ports on both coasts and rail networks inland in more than 2,000 sorties.

Liberators struck Venice harbor and the Monfalcone shipyards near Trieste.

American fighter-bombers in 50 strafing runs across Rieti air field northeast of Rome destroyed several grounded Focke-Wulf 190 fighters. Leghorn harbor on the west coast also was showered with bombs. Eight allied planes were lost in all actions and 10 enemy aircraft were shot down.

Heavy German artillery fire was reported from the 8th army front near the Adriatic as well as in the vicinity of Cassino.

Lt. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, allied air commander in the Mediterranean, was awarded the distinguished service medal for his outstanding work as chief of American air forces in Britain prior to his recent transfer to this theater.

[The German broadcast war bulletin said that German bombers and torpedo aircraft Thursday night made a heavy attack on an enemy supply convoy off the North African coast, sinking two allied destroyers, four freighters totaling 29,000 tons, and one big tanker.

FIND BOMBS RUIN 100 FRANKFURT WAR FACTORIES

LONDON, April 21 (AP).—British and American air raids have destroyed more than 100 war plants in Frankfurt and devastated half the 2,200 acres comprising the city's administrative and commercial center, the air ministry announced tonight.

Photographs taken after R. A. F. night attacks of March 18 and American daylight assaults of March 20 and 24 show the city's war potential virtually wiped out with only two or three war factories left undamaged, the ministry said.

Among factories either destroyed or severely damaged were listed those of the I. G. Farbenindustrie, Germany's greatest chemical combine, and the Alfred Teves aircraft parts plants. Four other factories turning out aircraft components were damaged. Photographs showed three direct hits on the main railway station, destruction of freight warehouses, warehouses and silos along the riverfront, and damage to the dock area at West Harbor.

DISCLOSES YANK PLANES' BIG ROLE IN SUMATRA RAID

30% of Attacking Craft Made by America.

BY EUGENE BURNS.

ABOARD AN ALLIED AIRCRAFT CARRIER, off Sabang, Sumatra, April 19 [Delayed] (AP).—Allied carrier-based planes, almost 80 per cent of which were American made, pinned down the Japanese air force and destroyed military installations at Sabang to their hearts' content in a furious 15 minute attack today.

The planes included Hellcats, Dauntless Avengers, Corsairs and Barracudas.

Jap Raids Thwarted.

The Japs attempted reprisal raids on the allied force but could not penetrate the fighter plane screen or the ships' anti-aircraft barrage.

[The official report of the attack, issued Thursday, said the fleet suffered no damage and lost only one plane. It said at least 25 Jap planes were destroyed in addition to heavy damage to installations. Since all the types of planes mentioned in this dispatch, except the Barracuda, are American, it might indicate much of the attacking force was American. This theory also was given credence by the fact that the writer has been covering United States naval operations in the Pacific.]

As we left our home base for the attack, American made patrol planes kept an "umbrella" over us. As we struck this morning, American made Liberators made a strong diversionary attack on the Andaman Islands, and then it was "bang-bang Sabang!"

Two Air Bases Pounded.

Every military installation was hit at two air fields, one on Little Sabang Island, off northwest Sumatra and the other at Ihonga on Sumatra.

Two big cargo ships, three corvettes, three huge oil tanks, docks, warehouses, barracks, a radio station, and power plant all received personal attention of the flyers. The Jap commander's personal quarters also were riddled by Hellcats.

From 60 miles away the returning flyers saw flames.

"Immeasurably better than the burning of Sabang is that we have started to kick the Jap from behind," said an allied naval observer.

Attack in Dawn's "Twilight."

The raid was launched in the "twilight" just before dawn. First Hellcats swooped on the Sabang air field, destroying seven Jap planes. Eight other Hellcats went to Ihonga airport and blasted three planes.

On high rode the air group commander—sometimes called "whispering Joe"—shouting orders to his men and taking pictures.

He said that, after taking a series of pictures, "I just couldn't stand the strain [of staying out of the battle], so I swooped down on an air field, collecting one transport and two or three fighters."

Planes Stop a Jap Warship.

On the second pass his wingman's plane was hit and the pilot bailed out two miles from shore. An allied submarine surfaced and closed the 12 mile distance under Hellcat protection. A Jap destroyer attempted to intercept the sub but was stopped by Hellcat dive bombers.

The flying skipper picked the largest ship and planted a bomb on its stern. Other airmen of the division hit smaller ships and oil tanks. A wave of bombing Avengers slipped 2,000 pound "Jap-busters" into two big cargo ships.

Somerville's comment on the successful raid was "great performance."

Damage Slight, Say Japs.

New York, April 21 (AP).—The Tokio radio today acknowledged northern Sumatra was attacked Wednesday by carrier based allied planes. An imperial headquarters bulletin recorded by the United States foreign broadcast intelligence service said:

"Our units intercepted the enemy and brought down 10 enemy aircraft. Damage suffered by our side was slight."

The Japanese Domei agency broadcast tonight that Tarakan, in northeastern Borneo, had been raided last night by "several allied PBY-2 planes, apparently referring to Coronada patrol bombers. Domei said one plane was shot down by interceptors and that there was "no damage to our ground installations."

A GROUND MAN FLIES BOMBER AND SAVES CREW

FOURTEENTH U. S. AIR FORCE HDQ. IN CHINA, April 19 [Delayed]—(AP).—Capt. Robert B. Hotz, a former Milwaukee newspaperman who had never flown anything except a Piper Cub, saved a B-25 Mitchell bomber's crew and himself recently when he took over after the pilot was wounded.

Capt. Hotz, a ground officer, had gone along on the raid as an observer and to take photographs. The plane had loosed her bombs on a railway bridge when she suddenly staggered from anti-aircraft fire. A pilot's hatch cover came hurtling back past. He heard a voice on the intercom phone: "Come to the cockpit at once."

It was the navigator, who had noticed Hotz' leather flying jacket and had concluded he was a flyer. Hotz found the cockpit in ruins and the pilot semi-conscious from shell wounds. The navigator, who had also suffered a wound, helped the pilot into a rear cockpit for first aid and Hotz took over.

He headed for Free China until Weber, his wounds hastily patched, took the controls again and landed the bomber down at a friendly air field—and then fainted.

JAP BLAMES JAPAN FOR STARTING WAR; PLEDGES VENGEANCE

HONOLULU, T. H., April 21 (AP).—Yuki Moriwake spoke in Japanese at a United States army ceremony. He was the spokesman for Japanese parents of four American soldiers killed in Italy and awarded the Purple Heart posthumously.

"We blame this upon Japan, which attacked the United States and started this war," he said at the recent ceremony. "We blame Japan as the evil instrument of destruction which indirectly caused the death of our boys, and until Japan is brought to her knees to pay fo rher dastardly crime, we shall not be satisfied.

"We, and other Japanese parents who have sons in the armed forces, will do our share for the United States."

EVANSTON YANK RUNS A HOTEL, AND IT'S LIVELY

Takes Over in Naples When Nazis Go.

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NAPLES, Italy, April 21.—It's a far cry from fighting on the beaches below Salerno, Italy, to supervising the care and feeding of 350 guests, but Lt. Evan McIlraith Jr., 1501 Hinman av., Evanston, Ill., would have it known that there is no lack of excitement in the latter task. He manages a hotel in Naples where American officers are billeted.

Lt. Evan McIlraith Jr.

It was a pretty good hotel until the Germans pulled out seven months ago. For something to remember them by they chopped up many of the rooms and bombed the front of the building. Much of the six story hostelry has since been rehabilitated but it will be some time before all the scars of war are removed.

Fighting Days Ended.

McIlraith, 24, is the son of an official of the Chicago Surface Lines. His wife, Virginia, lives in San Rafael, Cal. The lieutenant served with the 36th division 13 months, but his combat career was cut short by a stomach ailment after the Salerno fight and he was assigned to the hotel job when Naples was entered.

"Arguing with the Italian help around here doesn't leave many dull moments," McIlraith said. "Then there are such jobs as arranging menus and keeping the bars stocked. When you've got 350 American officers around with poker games raging at nights, the place isn't exactly a rest home."

Food with Music.

Three Italians who work at the piano, accordion, and violin, and pose as an orchestra, provide the counterpoint for the knives and forks at mealtimes. With their eyes on the tips, they go from "O Sole Mio" to "Funicuil Funicula" and then give out with astonishing versions of "When Irish Eyes are Smiling," "Pistol Packin' Mama," and an occasional college song medley.

JAPS USE TANKS BUT FAIL TO GAIN IN INDIAN DRIVES

SOUTHEAST ASIA HDQ., Kandy, Ceylon, April 21 (AP).—The Japanese have thrown reënforcements, including tanks, into their invasion of India, but still are being pushed back in hard fighting around the big allied bases of Imphal and Kohima, some 35 miles from the Burma border, Adm. Louis Mountbatten's headquarters said today.

First appearance of enemy tanks in the fighting at the edge of the Imphal plain was reported from the Palel area, southeast of Imphal, where British and Indian troops repulsed a Jap infantry attack supported by armor.

An influx of Jap troops was noted near Kohima, 60 miles north of Imphal, but Mountbatten's report said allied forces gained in their counter-offensive.

An allied force thrusting northeast from Imphal with tank and plane support was reported to have occupied hill positions 30 miles from Imphal and to be driving the Japs back steadily.

Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's Chinese troops in northern Burma were reported continuing their advance along the Mogaung river toward the Jap base of Kamaing, some 40 miles west of Myitkyina.

Quake Shakes N. Guinea; No U. S. Victims Reported

YANKS'LL HAVE TALL TALES TO TELL OF INDIA

They're Taking In All of the Sights.

BY CLAY GOWRAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW DELHI, India, April 21.—The thousands of American soldiers stationed here will never run out of stories to tell their grandchildren. They are building up an inexhaustible collection of tales about the shocking mixture of the old and new, of the filth side by side with regal magnificence which characterizes these twin cities, of old and New Delhi.

Everywhere in the streets and historical buildings of both cities you find them, studying guide books, snapping pictures of each other, and attempting with a dozen Urdu or Hindustani words they know to carry on conversations with bearded, gesticulating tradesmen.

Even in the deadly midday hours, when the burning heat settles over the streets like a smothering blanket and tropic-wise sahibs retire to the comforts of dampened down cots and long, cold drinks, the Americans still persist, looking for something that may have escaped their eyes on previous tours.

Cabs Jam Streets.

Newly arrived troops usually confine themselves to New Delhi for the first few days. A half mile walk in any direction yields at least a half dozen sights which would cause traffic jams in Chicago.

All day long the streets teem with battered taxicabs driven by maniacal, horn blowing, Indian chauffeurs, queer little two wheeled horse cabs called tongas, big wooden-wheeled wagons pulled by patient bullock teams, steered by ropes thru rings in their noses, and swarms of bicycles.

Along the curbs vendors shriek their wares or comb each other's heads for lice. Performing bears dance and wrestle with their owners, and tiny miraculously trained canaries thread beads, pull all the red threads from a pile of mixed up yarn, and then perch on your shoulder hoping you will give them a coin for their master.

The real social life begins about 9 p. m. Then burra sahibs or important men of their city and their memsahibs don sweltering evening dress and go off to what in the United States would be second rate movie houses or a visit to Davico's, Piccadilly, or the Imperial hotel for poor food, worse drinks, and dancing. American enlisted men favor many Chinese restaurants to wrestle with chopsticks at sweet and sour beef, shrimps and fried rice, or if particularly flush, chicken cooked with mushrooms and almonds.

Viceroy Has 340 Room Palace.

Next day, if free, they may get a chance to see the viceroy's house, where Field Marshal Archibald Wavell resides on a more than 300 acre estate in a 340 room palace, which is one of the finest in the world. Another favorite of the Americans is tremendous Jantar Mantar or Delhi observatory, built by Maharaah Jai Singh in 1710 when Delhi was the capital of the Moghul empire. The most famous among the instruments housed here is the ancient Niyat Chakra Yantra sun dial, which shows the time in Greenwich, Zurich, Turkey, and Japan.

After that the Americans usually are ready for their first trip to old Delhi. A tonga whisks them thru a gate of the wall around the old city and at the same time seems to carry them back into the forgotten ages. Old Delhi, with its stench and swarming native life, is like a ghost of the past compared to its modern twin a few miles away.

Here usually they head first to Chandni Chauk, the most famous thorofare in India and the noisiest district in the world. Chandni Chauk is the site of the finest jewelry, tapestry, and ivory shops in India, but in 1739 this half mile long street ran ankle deep in blood when the invading Persians under Nadir Shah massacred 100,000 Hindus in 10 hours.

Chicagoans Among Yanks.

Nearby is a red fort built in 1639 by Emperor Shah Jehan, who later in Agra was to build the world renowned Taj Mahal in the memory of his dead Queen Mumtax.

Among American troops working in Delhi and spending their spare time seeing the wonders of these cities are many Chicagoans. They include Corporals Harold Eichmann, 3245 S. Racine av., and William Degatis, 3316 Wallace st., and Privates David Larson, 7037 Merrill av.; John Daley, 6431 S. CAPTURE A NAZI 'DEATH WAGON' ON ANZIO FRONT

THE 5TH ARMY BEACHHEAD AT ANZIO, April 21 (AP).—Two of Germany's secret weapons—a "human torpedo" and a robot tank called the "death wagon"—fell into allied hands today.

After a week of hazardous night work in No Man's land British engineers hauled a wrecked robot or Goliath tank into their lines. The British discovered it could be operated by remote radio control.

The "death wagon" is about half the size of a British Bren gun carrier, weighs 8,267 pounds, and is technically classified as a B-4 armored vehicle. It is about 10 feet long and five feet wide, with a six-cylinder gasoline engine producing a top speed of 28 miles an hour.

It is designed to dump a 1,000 pound explosive charge on a pillbox or other strong point and withdraw before a time fuse sets off the explosive.

Has One Man Crew.

The one man crew is supposed to ride as far as possible, then dismount and then guide the tank by remote radio control. The tank hasn't been very effective either on the Russian or Anzio fronts.

The "human torpedo" ran ashore just north of the Anzio beach and two American soldiers lifted out of it a 17 year old German marine who explained he had "run out of gas."

By coincidence the first known German use of the "human torpedo" came in the same week that the British announced that they had used a similar contrivance to raid Palermo harbor 15 months ago when a new Italian cruiser was sunk and a large transport destroyed.

"All I've got to say is that it isn't a dull war in this beachhead," said Lt. A. M. Bernstein of Brooklyn, N. Y., one of the American anti-aircraft gunners who was amazed by the sight of the torpedo-shaped craft foaming toward the beach.

Rode in Steel Case.

"He wasn't sad to be captured alive," grinned Pvt. Joseph Hectmann, Detroit, Mich., another anti-aircraft gunner, in commenting on the reactions of the youthful German pilot.

The skinny young sailor had set out on the seeming suicide mission from a motor torpedo boat. His craft consisted of a conventional torpedo about 12 feet long attached beneath a similarly shaped steel case. He rode in the top compartment and looked out thru a glass cover.

His strategy was to spot allied shipping in Anzio harbor, fire his torpedo, then make a getaway in the upper compartment, which was a virtual one man submarine.

Both submarine and torpedo below had individual sources of power for propulsion. The sailor was equipped with a bulky combination life preserver and oxygen breathing apparatus.

IGNORES WOUND, SAVES TRAPPED AND HURT MATES

HDQ. 13TH A. A. F., South Pacific, April 3 [Delayed]—(AP).—Forgetting his own wounds in the heat of battle over Truk, Lt. Frederick C. Spear, a bombardier, rescued a trapped nose gunner from a crippled turret and then gave first aid to two other wounded companions.

Spear, of West Roxbury, Mass., was aboard a Liberator. In a 45 minute battle with nearly 100 Jap Zeros, he was wounded in the arm by 18 shell fragments. Then a Zero shot up the turret. Working frantically, Spear freed the unwounded gunner, Sgt. Curtis S. Kling of Schenectady, N. Y. The waist gunners, Sergeants John McAuliffe of the Bronx, N. Y., and Harold E. Fleenor of Elgin, Ill., were wounded so Spear and the nose gunner crawled back and gave them first aid.

Japs Strike at Chinese Center

YANKS RAID JAPS ON WAKE ISLAND IN 20TH ATTACK

Washington, D. C., April 21 (AP).—American bombers hitting Wake Island in the mid-Pacific for the 20th time since its capture by Japan dumped 30 tons of bombs there on Wednesday night, the navy reported today.

On the same day, the navy reported, other bombers attacked Ponape, which flanks the eastern approaches to Truk in the Caroline Islands, and hit the air field.

The enemy's isolated positions in the eastern Marshalls also were hit again.

MacArthur Sinks Jap Cargo Vessel.

ALLIED HDQ., Southwest Pacific, April 22 [Saturday] (AP).—Allied air patrols striking along the Hollandia coast of northern New Guinea have sunk a 1,000 ton Japanese cargo ship, Gen. MacArthur's headquarters announced today.

Highlighting widespread air actions in the southwest Pacific, his war report said that the latest raid, Thursday, on the enemy air base at Woleai Island in the western Carolines resulted in the destruction of four Jap aircraft.

Other targets included: Namber and Kamiri airdromes, Noemfoor Island off New Guinea; Kavieng, New Ireland; Lakunai and Rapoo airdromes, and Matupi supply areas, Rabaul, New Britain; Vanimo and Bunabun Bogia, and Kronzprinz harbors, New Guinea; and Buka, Aitara, Mosiga, Onolei, and Torokina on Bougainville in the Solomons.

BIG JAPANESE FORCE DRIVES TO ENCIRCLE CHINESE RAILWAY HUB

CHUNGKING, China, April 21 (AP).—The Japanese, using a force of some 50,000 men, are swiftly encircling the North Honan rail junction of Chenghsien [Chengchow], Chinese advices stated tonight. The American and British embassies ordered their nationals to flee the enemy offensive.

Chenghsien itself seemed likely to fall before the Jap drive, said by the Chinese to be aimed at seizing the 160 mile Chinese held section of the Peking-Hankow railway.

The Chinese command tonight indicated the Japs had narrowed to less than 30 miles an escape corridor thru which the Chinese forces defending Chenghsien could flee to the southwest.

A Jap column striking toward Chenghsien from the east brought the junction under shellfire, a Chinese bulletin stated, while two other columns from the east crossed the Peking-Hankow railway about 20 miles below Chenghsien and advanced 10 miles toward the important highway town of Mihsien.

Another large Jap force striking from the northwest was engaged only a few miles outside Chenghsien.

The Japs appeared to be succeeding in a plan to envelop Chenghsien, which Chinese army spokesmen say is the first aim of a campaign to free the Peking-Hankow railway, secure an overland communications route between North and Central China, and open a potential avenue of withdrawal for Jap forces south of the Yangtze if the allies land on the China coast and threaten Jap communications.

POLICE HUNTING NEW FIGURE IN CAPONE KILLING

A new figure yesterday entered the grand jury investigation of the slaying Monday of Jens Larrison, alias Larkin, in the Hall of Fame tavern, 4839 Ogden av., Cicero, owned by Mat Capone, brother of Al Capone. Police are seeking Mat Capone as the slayer and his bartender, Wally Sanders, who police say, was present at the slaying.

Wilbert F. Crowley, first assistant state's attorney, said the new figure in the case is Sonny Otto, alias Sonny Otts. Witnesses said Otto was with Capone before the slaying, and when Larrison was killed. Otto, too, has disappeared, Crowley added.

Subpenas for grand jury appearance were issued during the day for John Moore, alias Calude Maddox; Joey O'Brien, alias Joey Aiuppa, and Bob Taylor, whom Crowley called hoodlums who have an interest in the Paddock club, which was visited by Capone and Larrison before the killing.

SENATE INQUIRY WILL DELVE INTO MAIL TAMPERING

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 21.—A senate investigation was assured today into the threat to civil rights disclosed recently in the interception of correspondence between Miss Vivien Kellems, Westport, Conn., business woman, and a German engineer in Argentina.

A resolution calling for the inquiry was introduced by Sen. Reed [R., Kas.] by direction of the senate postoffice and post roads committee after an executive session at which a majority of the members agreed there was need for a thoro probe.

The resolution calls for a "full and complete" investigation of "the unauthorized use and disclosure of information" obtained thru operations of the war censorship act. It was referred back to the committee where its approval is expected to be automatic.

New Legislation Probable.

Members indicated that new legislation placing more safeguards around the use of censored mail by government agencies is probable.

"This is a question of the sanctity of the mails," remarked Sen. Feguson [R., Mich.]. "Censorship is essential in time of war, but only for the information of the government. It does not mean that a man's letters should become known to his business competitors or to competitors in love."

This last reference was to the nature of the letters written by Miss Kellems to Count Frederick Karl von Zedlitz of Buenos Aires, whom Rep. Coffee [D., Wash.] denounced in the house as a Nazi agent. Miss Kellems has acknowledged writing romantic notes to von Zedlitz, but has asserted the federal bureau of investigation was given full information regarding him and found nothing criminal in the correspondence.

Excerpts from Miss Kellems' private letters were made public in radio broadcasts by Drew Pearson, Washington gossip, who has been labeled "a chronic liar" by President Roosevelt. Pearson's radio sponsor, a laxative company, has been accused by the federal trade commission of "false and deceptive" advertising.

Expect to Call Pearson.

Pearson is expected to be called by the committee to explain how the passages from private correspondence entrusted to the mails got into his possession. Another witness will be Byron Price, director of censorship, who already has told the committee that he is as much interested as the senate in preventing abuse of the censorship system.

Rep. Coffee, assailed by Miss Kellems as "a sneaking coward," also may be summoned. It is general knowledge that he was given the excerpts by Pearson for introduction into the Congressional Record.

Sen. Reed has charged that passages from private letters are being peddled at Washington cocktail parties. He announced that the investigation would not be confined to the Kellems incident, but that the entire question of leaks, by which private correspondence becomes public, would be explored.

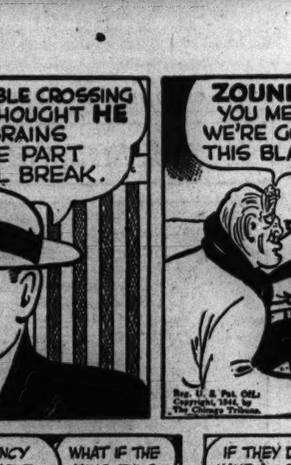
Talks to 'Sister'



FAYE EMERSON.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 21 [Special]. — Faye Emerson, Hollywood actress, and Virginia Emerson, 19, of Grand Rapids, who believes she is the actress' long lost sister, talked by long distance telephone last night.

Virginia, a telephone office cashier here, learned from the actress the whereabouts of two brothers, Larry, who is a corporal serving with the army in the Southwest Pacific, and Herfie, living in San Diego, Cal. Most of all she is now convinced that the Hollywood actress is the big sister who used to rock her to sleep when she was an infant. The two girls are expected soon to hold a reunion in Hollywood.

The Grand Rapids girl discovered her actress sister thru an appeal made by the latter in a magazine. Their family lived in Chicago but separated in 1930, Virginia coming to Grand Rapids with her mother, who died a year later.

5 FIREFIGHTERS HURT IN $15,000 FACTORY BLAZE

Five firemen were hurt last night while fighting a fire which caused $15,000 damage in a five story manufacturing building at 110-116 W. Kinzie st.

Four of them were knocked over by a blast of hot air and smoke when they opened the door to the basement, where the fire started. A fifth fireman was struck by a flailing fire hose. All of them remained on duty after receiving first aid.

Fire Marshal Mullaney said most of the damage was in the offices and plant of the Margin Rubber company. The quarters of other firms in the building were damaged by smoke and water. Traffic in Clark st. was rerouted because of the block caused by fire companies which responded to a 3-11 alarm. Cause of the fire was not determined.

Sgt. John J. Cramer.

Sgt. John J. Cramer, 24, whose plane was shot down Jan. 11 during a bomber raid over Germany, is a prisoner of war, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Cramer, 4525 N. Rockwell st., learned yesterday in a telegram from the war department. Previously they had received word from listeners to a German shortwave broadcast that their son was a prisoner, but the war department cautioned them that the information might have been broadcast for propaganda purposes. Actual word of his safety was sent thru the International Red Cross. Sgt. Cramer, who played baseball with semi-pro teams on the northwest side, enlisted four days after the attack on Pearl Harbor and went to Europe as tail gunner on a Flying Fortress last October. He was reported missing on his eighth bombing mission.

U. S. PROTECTION HELD LACKING IN FOREIGN POLICY

parently may not extend to other parts of the world, Bushfield said.

"The Dutch East Indies never heard of self-determination," Bushfield said. "Are they to be recaptured by us and returned to the Dutch without regard for the people? In India millions of citizens have no voice in their government. Is self-determination to be ignored there?"

Palestine, Finland, Poland, and other sections controled or about to be occupied by the British and Russians also were named by Bushfield as places where the United States would have to urge democratic government if our example in Italy is to be followed.

Bushfield said that the plans for a world organization with a police force to carry out its orders, proposed by Hull in his speech, did not take into consideration the ambitions of Russia and Great Britain.

Termed Hate Breeder.

"For a thousand years Russian rulers have dreamed of a warm water outlet to the sea," Bushfield said. "Today is her opportunity. Poland, Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, even the Balkans or Turkey, cannot prevent her. Is it our job to do so? You and I know that it is not and we are not going to do so.

"Thus ends the Atlantic Charter, and we gain the hatred of every small nation to which we break our promise of self-determination."

England, Bushfield said, intends to maintain the balance of power in Europe thru a combination of England and its European allies, which would prevent any other power from dominating that part of the world. He quoted from a recent article in a British magazine, the Nineteenth Century, often reflecting official British policy, which said:

"Better a despotically governed Germany that is not too strong than a liberal Germany that is too strong."

Urges Peace Term Statement.

Bushfield concluded his speech with a demand for an immediate declaration by the President or the state department of the general peace terms on which this country would be willing to terminate the war.

Fundamental requirements for peace, Bushfield said, include disarmament of axis countries, trial of those responsible for the war, return or repayment of war loot, and demobilization of war manufacturing plants in enemy countries.

Adjustment of American lend-lease accounts with other countries should be made immediately after the war, Bushfield said, and feeding the people of the war areas must be by joint contribution.

Finally, Bushfield said, the United States should control sufficient air bases thruout the world to insure our own defense.

CHICAGOAN GETS D. F. C.; ADRIFT AT SEA 5 DAYS

AN AMERICAN BOMBER BASE IN BRITAIN, April 21 (AP).—Two American air men who drifted in the North sea for five days and nights after their Marauder crashed off the Dutch coast were awarded distinguished flying crosses today. 30 NATIONS JOIN IN VAST MONEY STABILITY PLAN

U. S. to Contribute Most to 8 Billion Fund.

25 Per Cent in Gold.

Harry D. White, treasury monetary expert, said the United States' quota would be 2½ to 2¾ billion dollars, of which 25 per cent would have to be in gold. He said Great Britain would have a quota of about 1¼ billions; Russia, nearly 1 billion, and China about 600 millions. France, it is contemplated, would make a substantial, but undetermined contribution, he added.

The fund would be managed by a board on which each nation would be represented and by an executive committee, the joint statement said. Altho the statement said the distribution of voting power on the board and committee would be "closely related" to the amount of contributions, members of congress said they understood the United States would have only one of nine votes in the committee, or 11 per cent of the voice, compared with a 30 per cent payment.

The resources of the fund would be used "under adequate safeguards" to help member countries maintain exchange stability and correct maladjustments in their balance of payments. Thus, member countries would be entitled to buy foreign exchange from the fund to the extent of their quotas, in order to pay obligations arising from international trade.

Governing Body.

The governing body of the fund would control the par value of members' currencies, which values could only be changed after "consultation and approval of the fund."

Participating nations could not change the gold content of their ... moreover, without the ap... of every member country whose contribution to the fund was 10 per cent or more of the total.

Member countries would be forbidden to impose restrictions discriminating against one country in favor of another in international trade payments. Any member could withdraw from the plan at any time upon giving notice in writing. Its interest in the fund would be liquidated.

Breakdown of Currencies.

White said the proposed member quotas were based on various factors, including each nation's gold stock, gold production, and national income.

Morgenthau's published statement said the proposal is a long step toward preventing a breakdown of currencies and the imposition of restrictive and discriminatory exchange measures after the war. Hailing the plan as a move to facilitate more international trade, he said that "unless we agree to expand world trade and develop the world economy, few other economic agreements we might make will or can be effective."

He emphasized that the "United States is not committed in any way until congress has taken action." Our proposed contribution could be largely made, he said, from a present 2 billion dollar stabilization fund set up in connection with a pre-war agreement with Britain and France.

Proposal Is Denounced.

Numerous members of congress who heard the secretary denounced the proposal as a scheme to turn control of the American dollar and the power to manipulate our domestic economy and foreign trade over to an international board, on which this country would have only a minority vote. Some members said the proposal appears to be largely the work of John Maynard Keynes, British economist, who has been called the "Englishman who rules America."

"This would set up a super world government which could fix the value of every nation's currency, including our own dollar," said Rep. Knutson [R., Minn], ranking minority member of the house ways and means committee. "We would contribute 30 per cent of the gold, but would have only one vote of nine on the executive board. How are we going to manage the economies of the nations of the world when we've flopped so trying to manage our own?"

A "Visionary Scheme."

To Rep. Carlson [R., Kas.] the program was "a visionary scheme to destroy the value of the dollar and the American standard of living."

Its operation would soon mean, he said, that the United States would have to lower its tariffs and thus depress prices, or else continue to pour more billions into the international fund.

Rep. Smith [R., O.], whose attempt to read a critical analysis of the plan at the closed session was ruled out of order, left the meeting in protest, and issued a statement denouncing its "secrecy."

The Ohioan said the plan "is so vicious and perilous to the United States that no words can describe it."

Administration congressmen generally approved the program. Sen. Wagner [D., N. Y.], chairman of the senate banking committee, termed the proposal "one of the bright spots on the world horizon." Chairman Doughton [D., N. C.] of the house ways and means group called it a fine approach to national and international post-war problems.

AIM TO EDUCATE EUROPEAN YOUTH WITH AID OF U. S.

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 21.—United States participation in a scheme to reeducate Europe along democratic lines after the war is envisioned in the proposed draft of a constitution establishing an international body to administer the plan.

This was announced today by Rep. Fulbright [D., Ark.], who served as chairman of a meeting of allied ministers of education and seven observers including those from the United States, Russia, China, Norway, and Sweden.

Fulbright emphasized that, while the proposal was not protested by any of the delegates, no pledges had been given by any government. The decision of the United States on participation, he said, would be made later by the state department following a study.

Expect Dearth of Schools.

The proposed international organization would be known as the United Nations' Organization for Educational and Cultural Reconstruction. It would come into being following acceptance by 20 of the 44 allied and associated nations.

Believing that the victorious allies will find a dearth of educational institutions, trained teachers, textbooks, and other educational aid, Fulbright said the conference proposes that the allied nations act in unity to supply these needs.

Opportunities would be given for an exchange of students; for training teachers, principally by Britain, the United States, and Sweden; for supplying textbooks, printing presses, paper, and scientific instruments, and for rebuilding damaged universities and schools.

"If we persist in believing and preaching that democracy is the better way of life," said this former Rhodes scholar from the University of Arkansas, author of the Fulbright resolution [for United States participation in an international peace program], "then it is important that we do something about it."

Aims to Sway Youth.

"If we intend to feed the peoples of Europe thru UNRAA [the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration], we should go further and help in their reeducation in 10 years by getting hold of the young Hitler-built race of fanatical Nazis. Surely the democracies can, with equal urgency, build up their young people into devoted believers in the values for which we are fighting."

Fulbright said he believed the proposed educational organization was another step toward the establishment of an international political organization which would be concerned with the distribution of power in the post-war world. In the long run, he said, he believed UNRRA would be the most important contribution to world peace and understanding.

5,000 LOSE JOBS THRU 30% TAX ON ENTERTAINMENT

New York, April 21 [Special].—The new 30 per cent entertainment tax that went into effect three weeks ago already has thrown 5,000 performers out of work and it is expected that this figure will mount to 15,000 by May 1, Matt Shelvey, national administrative director of the American Guild of Variety Artists, said today.

A country-wide check is now being made by his organization, he said.

Reports Many Quit Shows.

Reports, he added, show that 24 places in the New York metropolitan area have abolished their shows, closed down or in some cases switched to instrumental music on which there is no tax, providing dancing is barred. In San Francisco 31 cabarets have eliminated entertainment or closed down, and 35 in Los Angeles.

The medium priced night clubs, cocktail lounges, and music bars which employ 70 per cent of AGVA's members will be reduced by 80 per cent by May 1, Shelvey predicted, unless congress acts quickly in easing the high entertainment tax.

Sees "Wishful Hoping."

He said night club operators are indulging in "wishful hoping" when they express the belief that the public will quickly adjust itself to the 30 per cent tax as they did in Canada after a lull in business when the tax was first put on.

"We are in a better position to judge how badly our people are being affected than any one else with all their phony surveys," he said. "Theatrical agencies and some night clubs are giving out false information as to how little these spots are being affected, based on wishful hopes that it may all change."

House Considering Cut.

He added that the entertainment director of the Hotel Shoreham in Washington, D. C., had advised him that entertainment was being eliminated at the capital night spot on May 1 unless there is some definite indication that the present 30 per cent tax will be eased by congress.

Rep. Harold Knutson of Minnesota introduced a resolution in congress last Wednesday to reduce the tax to 10 per cent and the measure is now before the house ways and means committee.

"Judging by the results of our survey thus far in the midwest, including Cleveland and Detroit," Shelvey added, "we feel certain that by May 1 half the night clubs in the midwest will be closed."

FOREIGN PAPERS WILL SEND MEN TO CONVENTIONS

Largest Press Delegation in History Assured.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

Interest in the Democratic national convention, as in the Republican convention, circles the globe, Ambrose O'Connell, major domo for the Democratic event, said yesterday. Both nominating meetings in Chicago will have the largest press representation in history.

Great Britain, Russia, China, Sweden, and South American countries will have newspaper men here. It is expected that many of them will stay over after the G. O. P. convention June 26 for the Democratic big show July 19.

Opposes Political Censorship.

Ben Berve, Republican state chairman, said yesterday he hoped that the foreign newspaper men would enjoy complete freedom from censorship of political news. It would be a fresh experience for some of them, he added. Censorship of political news leaving England, India, Russia, and other nations does not justify repayment in kind, he said.

O'Connell does not know yet what to do with all of the reporters. Democrats will have less floor space at the Chicago Stadium for them than the Republicans. At the G. O. P. convention there will be 2,150 delegates and alternates, compared with nearly 3,000 for the Democratic.

Vote Splitting Planned.

Democrats are allowing a bonus of extra delegates for those states winning for Roosevelt in 1940. They also are permitting two persons to share the vote of each delegate at large. Most states are employing this practice and some are defying the rule by splitting at-large votes four ways. In times past there have been fractional votes as small as 1-32d.

"I've been trying to keep the number of fractional votes down," O'Connell said. "In Michigan last week I warned them that if they don't heed war time conditions the delegates at large will find themselves really at large—sleeping in the parks. Politics will not make strange bedfellows if there are six or seven in one bed."

ANTI-NEW DEAL BOOK EDITION IS CURBED BY WPB

Democrat Objects to Limit on Paper.

Dr. Gleason L. Archer, national chairman of the anti-New Deal American Democratic National committee, is the author of a book titled "On the Cuff," which has just come from the bindery in a limited edition, "limited," he says, "by WPB." Unless he is granted more paper for more copies, the book may become a victim of the practices it denounces.

Dr. Archer says he recognizes the necessity of dictatorial powers in war. His objection is that the Roosevelt system, which he declares repeatedly has communism as its goal, is the same scheming which "ever since Franklin D. Roosevelt entered the White House" has had the nation "on the road to regimentation and bankruptcy."

Heads Organization's Work.

Dr. Archer, who came to Chicago to direct the committee's organization work from its offices at 105 S. La Salle st., worked his way thru high school and college and is president of Suffolk university, in Boston, which is conducted especially for working students.

All thru his book, which sketches American governmental experiments from the communistic failure in Plymouth colony, he argues for private enterprise as the only system to maintain the "free spirit" of the people and the economic prosperity of the nation.

Cites Menace to Industry.

"Under the cover of war necessity," the author asserts, "the administration has created conditions, with burocratic restrictions and taxation, under which nearly all the smaller industries of the nation are endangered, and similar peril is confronting the larger industries as well. . . . Can anyone believe that the inevitable inching up of 'social gains' is not a deliberate process of destruction of private industry?"

Chapters discussing the New Deal period are loaded with tables showing increasing spending and increasing indebtedness from year to year and with quotations from congressional committee hearings and similar sources.

NEW DEAL BUYS TEXAS DELEGATE VOTES: O'DANIEL

Washington, D. C., April 21 (AP).—Sen. O'Daniel [D., Tex.], back from a visit to his home state, predicted in an interview today that most of the Texas delegation to the Democratic national convention in Chicago "will be bought and paid for by the New Deal dynasty" to support a fourth term for President Roosevelt, despite the fact that the average Texan is "fed up on this unnecessary rationing and regimentation."

"While they may do some shadow boxing for a while after they get there, they'll eventually come up and lick the log," he asserted.

Commenting on his trip to Texas, he said he visited people in the stores, barber shops, farms, ranches, and homes and found them willing to make any sacrifice to win the war. But he added that they're waiting until election time to get at the elected officials who have permitted this dynasty and burocracy to grow up here in Washington."

37½ MILLION VOTE FORMS ORDERED FOR SERVICE MEN

The commission said the large number was ordered so there would be an adequate supply even if some shipments were lost.

COURT ASSAILS MOTHERS WHO NEGLECT YOUNG

Working mothers, many of them employed in war plants, who leave their children unsupervised, were blamed yesterday for at least 50 per cent of the delinquency cases among juveniles by Judge Frank H. Bicek, presiding judge of the Juvenile court.

A few of the employed mothers have a sincere desire to help in the defense effort of the nation, he said, but to many others a job means independence, new friends and amusements, more excitement, and a chance to shed home responsibilities, he added.

"In many instances the mother is earning more than the father and the court has to resort to the threat of a jail sentence before some women will consent to give up their jobs." the judge said in explaining that fathers are usually more cooperative than mothers when appearing before the court.

OPA MAY ALTER APRIL 30 CUT IN BUTTER POINTS

Slap at Advance News of Ration Plan Hinted.

1. Changes in the amount of ration points by which the value of butter will be reduced on April 30 were hinted in Washington after publication in THE TRIBUNE of statements from authoritative sources that huge storage stocks would result in a cut from 16 to 8 points. Altho the high OPA official in Chicago, from whom it was learned that a 8-point reduction had been decided upon, insisted that he knew there had been such a decision, rumors in Washington were that the new value might be set at 12 points in an effort to discredit the "premature publicity."

Heavy Movement Needed.

The Chicagoan said the OPA must move nearly 25 million pounds of butter into consumers' hands within six weeks to free cooler space for an anticipated increase in production. Rae E. Walters, regional OPA administrator, did not deny that point value reductions in butter and beef, and removal of pork from rationing, were 'contemplated, but said he had no word from Washington as to what the reductions, if effected, might be.

2. The war food administration announced in Washington that meat famine fears, "stirred by earlier dire predictions," are subsiding in the face of pork and beef supplies considerably exceeding those of a year ago. In an open letter to the food trade, WFA said enough meat will be available for the period of April thru June to allow civilians a per capita consumption at a yearly rate of 139 pounds, or about 13 pounds more than the pre-war average of 1935-'39.

Twice as many hogs, more cattle, and nearly as many sheep and lambs are being marketed as a year ago, WFA said.

Meatless Days 'Unfair'

Wilbur La Roe Jr., counsel for the Eastern Meat Packers' association, announced at the close of a meeting in New York yesterday that the association was appealing to mayors thruout the country to end meatless days. The association is also asking OPA to take "emergency measures" to suspend ration points on bellies, bacon, and sausage items. After citing unprecedented warehouse congestion a resolution adopted by the independent packers read:

"Under such conditions, meatless days are unfair to the farmers, to the processors, and to the consuming public, and injurious to the war effort."

3. The OPA raised ceiling prices, effective today, on poultry at all price levels in an effort to get more fowl on market counters. Dressed and live poultry went up 2 and 2½ cents a pound in the Chicago area. Prices on fresh dressed broilers, fryers, and roasting chickens were set at 46½ cents a pound, an increase of 2 cents. Live birds went up 2 cents to 40 cents. Fresh dressed hens were increased from 39½ to 42 cents, and live hens from 33½ to 36 cents. Ducks went up 2 cents to 38 cents a pound dressed. Wholesale prices also were increased, but on a lesser scale.

Farmers Cut Production.

A survey of hatcheries, farmers, and poultry officials revealed that the country is heading for a serious shortage of eggs and poultry next winter as a direct result, paradoxically, of the overwhelming production. Consumers were urged to use up the huge surplus now jamming the nation's farms and storage plants in order to be assured of a continued liberal supply.

Homer Huntington, general manager of the Egg and Poultry National board, said that farmers, discouraged by low sale prices and high feed costs, are cutting down their production sharply. He estimated that many farmers are culling their flocks up to 50 per cent and are not planning any replacement fowl. Many large hatcheries will close down on May 1, he said, because their orders have been cut drastically.

Baby Chick Orders Drop.

Joseph Kripner, manager of the Corn Belt hatcheries, 7770 Irving Park rd., declared orders for baby chicks have dropped off to one-third of last year's.

"Farmers are getting out of the egg and chicken business because they cannot afford to sell eggs at 26 cents a dozen when their feed costs are 20 per cent above last year," he said.

THE QUESTION.

WHERE ASKED.

THE ANSWERS.

Ed Foley, student, 5431 Grace st.—For two years I failed to pass my life saving tests because of my inability to break holds while I was in the water. I took exercises at home and practiced running in school and holding my breath for long periods. The result was that I finally won my merit badge in life saving.

Arthur Montgomery, student, 702 W. 21st pl.—My goal was to become an Eagle Scout and, come what may, I intended to go thru with it. At one time, tho, my memory wasn't very good and I had quite a struggle trying to remember all the city laws and other information we had to know to get our merit badge for civics.

Richard Karp, draftsman, 7655 Adams st., Forest Park—Earning the various merit badges was great sport and I enjoyed it a lot while I was working to become an Eagle. I had a little trouble in first aid trying to remember what treatment to apply for the symptoms given and also the different bandages and how to make them.

Bob Metzger, student, 3628 Milwaukee av.—To get a merit badge in bird study was about the hardest task I ever had in Scouting. I had to memorize the names of 40 different kinds of birds and be able to describe what they look like, where and how they live, what they eat, and which ones are helpful to agriculture.

Arthur Kroepfl, student, 2243 W. 21st pl.—Some merit badges were hard for me to earn and others were easy. I learned something new with each award and found out more about first aid and life saving than I ever realized existed before I studied it in Scouting. If I had to do it over, I think it would be time well spent.

Bill Wilson, student, 1732 Melvina av.—I had a lot of fun filling all the requirements for an athletic merit award until it came to running a certain distance in a given amount of time. I had to do it in a gymnasium, and running in a circle wasn't as easy as running in a straight line might have been. But I made it.

INDICT 3 IN HUGE PLOT TO DISPOSE OF GAS COUPONS

Detroit, Mich., April 21 (AP).—A federal grand jury today indicted Ed. A. Nowack, publisher of a political weekly at Lansing, Mrs. Dorothy Gertrude Martin, former chief clerk of a Lansing ration board, and her husband, Frederick J. Martin, former Lansing theater manager, on charges of conspiring to violate rationing regulations.

They are charged with conspiracy to "transfer and assign and to accept transfer and assignment" of stolen gasoline coupons.

Named as co-conspirators but not defendants were two Detroiters alleged to have purchased coupons from Mrs. Martin. They are Alfred Belasco, former gasoline station operators, and Howard Bruce, theatrical booking agent.

In a separate indictment Mrs. Martin was charged with selling 19,200 C-2 coupons to Belasco for $1,920 at her Lansing apartment the night of March 6, and with selling 115,000 B-2 and C-2 coupons to Bruce and Belasco on Feb. 13. Fitzpatrick said the payment for these coupons was approximately $12,000.

$100,000 BLAZE DAMAGES GARY STORAGE HOUSE

Damage estimated at $100,000 was done last night by fire of undetermined origin which swept thru half of a warehouse at 9th av. and Taft st., Gary, shared by the mail order houses of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and Montgomery Ward & Co.

The fire started in the Sears section and virtually all the loss was there. Damage to the Ward stock was light. A fire wall separated the two stocks of merchandise.

Eleven Gary fire companies under Chief John McCracken worked two hours to put out the fire. A rear section of the warehouse was blown out by the explosion of a drum of alcohol.

SCHOOLS SERVE 21,311 DOZEN OF EGGS IN APRIL

Chicago public school lunchroom customers, who got a liberal menu of eggs in March, when the federal government gave the schools 72,000 dozen free, continued to get a liberal supply of egg dishes in April, with school purchases nearly doubling those for February.

In three weeks in April, the schools bought 21,311 dozen, compared with 15,789 dozen in four weeks in February. Purchases in addition to federal donations totaled only 6,125 dozen in March.

Frank O. Washam, director of lunchrooms, said eggs would be used liberally as long as the national surplus supply continues.

protest in Washington with the OPA.

Dr. Floyd F. Peckham, president of the Illinois Osteopathic association, said the restriction "produces unnecessary hardships on patients of osteopathic physicians numbering hundreds of thousands."

Walters said the regulations are not intended to restrict any legitimate diet for any ailing person.

Paul A. H. Shults, metropolitan area OPA director, said local boards receive from 400 to 600 requests each month for additional meat from patients with doctors' authorizations.

500,000 Food Containers Are Salvaged by Children

Approximately half a million crates, bushels and half bushel baskets, hampers, and burlap bags were gathered by Chicago elementary school children yesterday and Thursday in a two day drive to salvage fruit and vegetable containers, A. O. Wilmot, Chicago area supervisor of the war food administration and campaign chairman, said yesterday.

8,800,000 Pounds Turkey Held for Overseas G. I.s

Washington, D. C., April 21 (AP).—The war food administration issued a set-aside order today under which the army expects to obtain approximately 8,800,000 pounds of hen turkeys for holiday dinners of American service men and women overseas. The order will apply in Illinois, Iowa, and 13 other states.

BLACK MARKET IN GAS TRACED TO OPA'S POLICY

Responsibility for drastic gasoline rationing, which has A card drivers, composing 68 per cent of all motorists, operating on only two gallons a week, will be placed at the door of the office of price administration in Washington senate hearings.

This was disclosed yesterday by Russell B. Brown, general counsel for the Independent Petroleum Association of America, in a report to the organization's president, Ralph T. Zook. Brown said the "oil story" will soon be told to the banking and currency committee of the senate in hearings on extension of the price control act, under which OPA, which expires June 30, was created.

He said the refusal of Washington bureau heads to allow a 35 cents a barrel increase for crude oil, frozen at an average of $1.18 cents Oct. 1, 1941, had contributed to a petroleum shortage and led to the black market in gasoline. He added:

"It was inevitable there would be a black market. Two gallons a week yields so few miles that it is scarcely worth having."

FREED ON MARIHUANA CHARGE.

Miss Leta Lopez, 21, of 925 Montrose av., a dancer, yesterday told Judge Frank E. Donoghue in Women's court that an acquaintance had given her the marihuana cigarets found in her possession April 7 and she was freed on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Other prizes will be determined later, according to Joseph Rotunno, chairman of the drive.

The entire and absolute freedom of the press is essential to the preservation of government on the basis of a free Constitution.
—Daniel Webster.

NINETY-NINE YEARS IS TOO SHORT.

A house naval affairs subcommittee, headed by Rep. Hebert, a Louisiana Democrat, has returned from a tour of our new Caribbean bases with the impression that, in the history of a nation, 99 years is a relatively short period. That is the period for which the British leased us the island bases that are essential to the defense of the eastern approaches of our country.

What the military development of the next century will be we can see only dimly, but we can be certain that air power will become an increasingly important weapon of war. As the range of planes increases, the bases in the Atlantic from which we can defend our eastern seaboard against attack will become increasingly vital to us.

The congressional committee says: "Rather than await the expiration date [of the 99 year leases], and encounter the hazards of ill will and difficulties which may arise, we feel that steps should immediately be taken by our government to have the leases changed to run in perpetuity."

This is a start in the right direction. The statement does credit to the foresight and patriotism of the congressmen who made it. Action on the Atlantic bases should be followed by determination to acquire the Pacific bases necessary to defend the western approaches of the United States and by the retirement of all European nations from this hemisphere. So long as they retain the vestigial remains of their original colonial empires in the Americas, trouble spots will exist to involve the United States and other American nations in the quarrels that have been perpetual in Europe and which we have no reason to believe will ever cease.

Congress, which receives this recommendation, must recognize that if it is to be carried out it must be insisted upon with great vigor. The administration is not interested in the United States. Its leaders are seeking personal aggrandizement by the means of devoting our influence and resources to the interests of foreign powers. Mr. Roosevelt and his cabinet cannot conduct an American foreign policy because they have subordinated the American interests that such a policy would serve. They will do nothing about the bases unless congress forces them to do so.

THE SEDITION TRIAL.

The fact that the first seven veniremen questioned in the Washington sedition trial confessed such prejudice against the defendants that they had to be excused from jury duty is a testimonial to the success of the campaign of the department of justice, the Washington Post, and various gutter commentators to confuse the minds of prospective jurors in the case.

These seven veniremen, called from panels heavily loaded with government payrollers, made honest admissions of their prejudice. The real danger will come from those of less frankness, whose prejudice is so great that they will conceal it in order to get on the jury and railroad the defendants.

The country has reason to regard the sedition trial with the greatest apprehension. Aside from the Nazi bundists who are included in the indictment for the purpose of prejudicing the jury against the other defendants, the people on trial are largely crackpots and zealots. Many of them hold opinions such as fair minded Americans repudiate. But they cannot be tried for their opinions and they are not being tried because they were seditious. They are being tried because they criticized the administration.

They have been transported for trial to the seat of New Deal power in the hope that patronage and government pay rolls would make it impossible to get a fair jury. Already there has been an attempt to make a star chamber of the courtroom, on the excuse that the number of defendants made it impossible to give space for newspaper men to watch the selection of the jury. That was stopped only by the threat of a mass "strike" by defense counsel.

The number of defendants and counsel was known, of course, in advance, and larger courtrooms are available in the city of Washington. The specious excuse on which it was attempted to bar the press betrayed the real purpose, which was to deny the defendants a public trial.

DANGEROUS ELEVATORS.

A two year old child broke away from his mother while riding in an elevator in a north side hotel the other day, ran to the front of the car, and was killed when his head struck a metal indicator on the shaft wall. The elevator was not protected by an inner safety gate.

The building commissioner's office reports that 90 per cent of the elevator accidents in Chicago occur in doorways. The elevator inspectors, building employes, and service men for the elevator companies have been extremely successful in keeping elevator machinery running safely.

Under the city building code, all elevators installed now must be equipped with safety gates. Interlocking gates which have to be closed before the car can start must be installed on all elevators running more than 150 feet a minute and passenger elevators fall in this class. Old elevators, however, can operate under the laws in effect when they were constructed, and for this reason many of them do not have inner gates.

Building Commissioner Gerhart says that he intends, as soon as critical materials become available, to ask the city council to pass an ordinance requiring every passenger elevator in the city, regardless of age, to be equipped with inner safety gates. This proposition has been advocated before in other Illinois cities and has met stiff opposition from the building owners. It must not be allowed to fail in Chicago because of that kind of selfishness.

The building commissioner's engineers say that wooden safety gates which do not use critical materials are practical and can be installed right now by building owners who are far sighted enough to want to prevent accidents. They would be temporary and would have to be replaced some day by metal gates, but they would pay for themselves many times over if they save only one child's life.

THE OFFICE OF WORDY INCOMPETENCE.

One of the reasons why the people of this country are confused by the conduct of the war is that the honest correspondents whom American newspapers and press associations have sent to the front have extreme difficulty in getting their stories back home.

There are never enough facilities to handle press copy on any major front. One reason is the monopolistic activities of Mr. Fly of the FCC and other burocrats, who are apparently determined to prevent Press Wireless, Inc., from using its existing facilities to handle the news and other dispatches that the companies enjoying official favor have proved incompetent to move. A second reason is the monopolization of existing facilities by the OWI, which crowds out legitimate news reports for the American people in order to transmit wretchedly written propaganda that generally finds its way into the waste baskets of foreign editors.

A correspondent who has been detailed for two years to Gen. MacArthur's headquarters in Australia has just sent back to Washington, thru the army censorship, an analysis of some of this journalistic tripe. He found that the OWI was taking up as much as four hours daily to transmit to Australia, over army circuits, a so-called news service. This service is distributed to every daily and weekly newspaper in Australia. None of them, so far as the American reporter was able to find out, uses the stuff.

Why they don't use it is plain from specimens of the copy transmitted. A couple of prizes were two "Dear Jane" letters sent overseas in a single day. These letters, composed by some one using the name of Jean Bemis, are supposed to tell a typical Australian girl named Jane what her American sisters are like. One letter, on March 23, told what an American woman's favorite question would be if she were attending a press conference held by some person unnamed, what is the favorite American first name, and the fact that WACs may be married in civilian clothing. A second letter, on the same day, told all about a children's nursery at a military camp and how Joel Kupperman, the Quiz Kid, answers questions.

There were reams and reams more of the same, some of it with a pronounced fellow traveler slant. That stuff is bilge. A country editor would discard it and fill up his space with boilerplate, even at the risk of offending the volunteer correspondent that sent it to him. Australian editors are no more hospitable to it.

Regard for a moment the mountain that brings forth these mice. The OWI has some 600 employes in its San Francisco office, from which the Australian reports emanate. San Francisco is puny beside the New York office, which has between 2,500 and 3,000. How many work in the central madhouse in Washington the Lord may know, but probably Elmer Davis does not.

By comparison, THE TRIBUNE has some 360 persons on its editorial pay roll. This includes office boys and stenographers as well as reporters and editors. The Associated Press is the biggest news service in the world. Its largest bureau, which writes a third of its news report, is in Washington. It has about 100 employes there, including traffic [transmission] employes along with reporters, photographers, and editors.

Under the present man power stringencies, it is a constant struggle to maintain the efficiency of a staff of 360 on THE TRIBUNE. The AP has the same troubles, as does every other first rate news gathering organization. But the OWI hires 600 in San Francisco, and thousands in New York and Washington. The vast majority of these people can't be competent. The few who are are smothered in a welter of failures, phonies, political pets, fellow travelers, and draft dodgers.

OWI would be doing an unnecessary job, even if it were doing it well. Its hacks don't tell the American people how the war is being run. They spend such time and talent as they devote to their duties trying to keep the people from finding out how it is run. If foreign editors want news from the United States, as they probably do, they buy it from press associations that furnish them professional and accurate reports.

And, as the report from Australia indicates, the OWI is not only doing an unnecessary job, it is doing it badly. Any newspaper man with a shred of professional pride cannot help cringing as he reads the inane, worthless nonsense that is being distributed under the sponsorship of his government. OWI truly stands for the Office of Wordy Incompetence.

MR. PEPYS TODDLES AROUND.

22d April—Have had a long week. Dined with six cronies at Mrs. Nagy's Hungarian homestead on Orchard st., enjoying the goulash and the sweetened pancakes. Heard a remarkable story about a poem by Abraham Lincoln, unknown to Old Abe experts because it has been destroyed.

Explored on foot the region that used to be called Bavarian Heaven, and discovered Sullivan st., narrowest in Chicago. It can be crossed in a good running jump. That district will be swept clean of its old frame cottages some time, but meanwhile it has "atmosphere," such as novelists and artists seek.

Went to see "Rebecca" on the stage, and liked it because it has no political message. Thought young Diana Barrymore has expressions of countenance that recall her Aunt Ethel. She acts a shy little second wife who is always being told what a brilliant creature her forerunner was, and so the burden she bears resembles that of the editors of this column since B. L. T.'s passing in 1921.

Went to a literary cocktail party at the Tavern club and met Bennett Cerf, the New York bookman, and two of his authors—bright young women of Chicago who have joined in writing a novel called "These Are the Times." Collectively they are Clare Jaynes, which is a combination of their first names. Perhaps the cocktails played a trick with my eyesight, but I thought they dressed like twins, which they are not. Discovered that literary parties provide fine food and drink, which is contrary to tradition.

Read a few books and wrote a few words, and so forgot to mope about the backwardness of the spring, which is so far behind schedule that Bob Becker has gone to Biloxi to ask what's the matter.

BARD OF AVON.

(Wm. Shakespeare, April ?, 1564, to April 23, 1616.)

How soft the Avon flows past Stratford still
To meet the Severn, bound for Bristol bay.
How quiet rests the bard that men called Will,
Whose boyhood watched this stream pursue its way.
To mingle with a vast, more troubled sea;
His throbbing London saw life as a show
Of rich and bright renascence pageantry.

Tho Juliet, Portia, Rosalind are gone,
The moonlight yet sleeps sweet upon the grass;
Sad Lear and merry Falstaff have passed on,
But Shakespeare's world cannot and will not pass.
The music of his lines will always sing
While melting snows unveil the blooms of spring.

Dandelions of Childhood.

Remember in the spring how we would take stalks of dandelion blossoms, cut them in quarters, put them in water, and watch the ends curl? They were not particularly attractive. Why did we do it? O, there was no particular reason, except that it was a spring custom and a charming one.

Remember how we walked barefooted in the puddles of warm spring rain, underlaid with grass; how we would stop and see the reflection of the blue sky and its lovely white clouds that floated lazily by over our bare feet and green grass, beneath the rippling pool? There would be a yellow dandelion peeking above the water, and dandelions are lovely, as water which nurtures them is lovely.

Remember how we braided dandelion blossoms into chains, yards and yards of yellow blossoms, and the happiness we had in this simple form of self-amusement? Remember how the dandelions shone in the yellow sunlight and threw golden lights all about?

I wonder how many yards of dandelion chains have been braided by children since the world began? They would probably reach from earth to sun and back again, in golden loops of yellow sunshine by day and of golden moonlight by night.

That is what dandelions are, sunlight and moonbeams.

To Zanzibar, to Zanzibar,
Where lovely, crimson clove trees are,
The way is long, the sailing far.

And there Zanzara waits for me,
Her zither resting on her knee,
Beside the soft Azanean sea.

But I am here and she is there,
And I can't say I really care.
(Her face is not so very fair.)

Her tattooed breast, and throat, and arm,
Attract me less than they alarm—
And zither music has no charm;

Yet I would travel fast and far
To be alone in Zanzibar
Where lovely, crimson clove trees are.

Origin of 4-11-44?

In Cincinnati, 50 years or more ago, "policy" was played by the citizens. The drawings came over from Covington, across the river, about 4 p. m. Bets were accepted until the arrival of the messenger, who needed about an hour to reach the Cincinnati headquarters.

One day a gambler went up into the tower of the Gift fire engine house on 6th st. near Vine st. He had a telescope. As soon as the numbers were drawn in Covington, a confederate chalked 4-11-44 on the sidewalk. The gambler in Cincinnati read them thru his telescope, and his gang played them all over town, for big winnings.

This is the story of 4-11-44. Any newspaper office in Cincinnati will verify it. Anonymous.

KIDNEY STONES IN FRACTURE CASES.

HOW do we explain the development of stones within the kidneys or the bladder? Well, there are many possible factors, any one of two of which may be responsible.

First of all, we think of slowing down of the outflow of urine and the fact that it may become more concentrated. In consequence, minerals may drop out of solution, particularly if irritation, due to the presence of bacteria, has injured some of the cells. Such a circumstance may lead to the deposit of a tiny crystal which will grow and increase gradually into a figurative boulder.

Now and then it will fall to the lot of a given individual to excrete a large amount of calcium [lime]. This will occur naturally when he remains perfectly quiet for a long period—for example, following a fracture. We have learned, therefore, that the more active the victim can be, the less frequently will stones form.

But why does this happen? Whenever the skeleton is not called upon to do much work, it gets rid of a considerable fraction of its mineral matter just because it does not need it. This is called "decalcification." With a patient who is obliged to stay in bed for several months, equilibrium is finally established, with the bones sufficiently strong to support the frame for its minimum requirements. During the adjustment interval, however, the urine will contain more minerals than it should and some of them may be precipitated.

It is an actuality and not a theory that there is no remedy, no medicine, that will stop the process other than allowing the patient to do as much as possible with his muscles. But, in addition, imbibing large volumes of fluids will dilute the excretions and thus counteract the "settling" tendency. Rendering the drinking water slightly acid with hydrochloric may be of value. If organisms are thriving we may banish them by means of antiseptics. If the urine of a bedfast patient exhibits pus, we have a double hazard.

Another helpful plan is to employ an acid-ash diet. At the same time, we must make certain that it supplies generous quantities of vitamins A and B. Breakfast may consist of cooked cereal, eggs, milk, and prunes or plums. The other meals are composed of meat [beef or lamb preferred] and such vegetables as potatoes, asparagus, tomatoes, carrots, onions, beets, cabbage, etc. Apricots are particularly useful. Desserts include tapioca, custards, bread pudding, or ice cream. This bill of fare rarely becomes distasteful. Edibles can be varied so that appetite will be maintained.

The sufferer's position in bed should be changed as often as circumstances will permit, and distention of the bladder should be avoided. In other words, any pressure which prevents free emptying of the urinary pouch will need to be corrected.

Finally, when the X-ray expert is making films of the fracture to observe the progress of healing, a wise precaution is to photograph the kidneys to see whether "rocks" have accumulated. At any rate, the victim can imbibe enough liquid to forestall their formation.

USE RESTRAINT.

A. P. writes: My mother-in-law insists on kissing and embracing our infant so forcefully that I am certain she must cause discomfort if not pain. Don't you think this is a harmful practice?

REPLY.

Yes, indeed. We dare not subject the jelly-like bodies of infants to pressure, even when lovingly administered. Furthermore, we can spare these precious bits of humanity insanitary osculations.

OIL PNEUMONIA.

Mrs. W. writes: When my youngster has a cold, my mother insists that I use nose drops. But I seem to remember that you cautioned against this treatment because of the danger of pneumonia. Am I correct?

REPLY.

Yes, you are. Oily drops in the nasal passages are not for children. There is too much danger that the material will be inhaled.

RUNS IN FAMILY?

R. E. writes: My father and my grandfather are huge men—weighing 275 pounds. People tell me I will be as large by the time I am 30. What are my chances?

REPLY.

It's all up to you. Exercise and control of appetite constitute the answer. On the other hand, you inherit the frame of your ancestors. This cannot be changed. But you do not need to burden your skeleton with excess pounds.

SHORT THUMB.

Mrs. S. writes: My 5 year old child has a small thumb on the left hand, which has been diagnosed as "congenital aplasia." What is the cause?

REPLY.

Probably a "born with" defect. The word "aplasia" means incomplete development. The best treatment now is heat and gentle massage. Encourage use.

IRRITATION.

W. S. writes: What is the reason that a man of 72 gets hiccups several times daily?

REPLY.

Probably some irritation of the phrenic nerve or the diaphragm. Look for trouble within the gastric pouch.

It gives one pause to contemplate
The destiny that may await
The lovelorn spider. Far from smart
Is he in matters of the heart.
Inflamed, impetuous, intense,
But lacking any common sense,
A fool is he, and makes his prayer
To tenderness that isn't there.
In madness he'll select his bride,
And find—too late—it's suicide.
Far wiser would the spider be
To study entomology.

He'd learn what lady spiders are
Before he ventured out too far;
He'd learn things well worth thinking of:
How does a lady spider love?
Let's count the ways. [Thanks, Mrs. B.,
For lending me your poetree.]
The spider loves her lover fat,
The way a ferret loves a rat;

This Changing World.

The teen-age group in the suburb was having a dance, and one young beauty received invitations from three venerables of 16. She accepted one, and running into him the morning of the dance, looked him over carefully. "You need a hair cut," she told him severely. The boy said he guessed he did, but he didn't have any money. "Here, take this," she said, and handed him 50 cents. With that he raced contentedly off. That night she waited and waited for him to turn up to escort her to the dance. He never did.

The Language.

In Search of Truth.

Not long ago that eminent Chicago critic, Ashton Stevens, wrote scathingly of the dilettante investigation of two of our fellow workers, Messrs. Charles Collins and Vincent Starrett, into the history of the Baker Street Irregulars. Mr. Stevens assailed them for the shallowness of their research and indicated that if they ever had known the truth, they had forgotten it. As one with a tender affection for all three of these luminaries, this department is compelled to contribute to their differences by quoting from Mr. Stevens' own published account [in 1936] of his participation in the San Francisco fire.

Wrote Mr. Stevens: "As the flames advanced I found myself at midnight in a public square. . . . I was still dressed for the opera. . . . I finally found a corner of that crowded square whereon to lay me down for a bit of forgetful sleep. I remember that last night's white opera gloves, now slightly soiled, were put on against the chill wind that blew up, and that my black overcoat was buttoned tight around me. And as I lay there . . . I thought I had reason to believe that I was still very attractive. . . . For many women came and looked down on me with a strange and, I thought, yearning expression in their faces. Indeed, I didn't realize what their expressions meant until dawn when I awoke to behold right above me a huge sign that read: 'Ladies'."

Well, Mr. Stevens then was married to the sister of Gertrude Atherton, the novelist. In her memoirs, "Adventures of a Novelist," Miss Atherton also wrote of the San Francisco fire and Mr. Stevens.

"Ashton told me," she wrote, "that he and Aleece had run out of the Occidental in their bare feet with nothing over their night clothes but top hat and opera cloak, and then, as Aleece had refused to reenter the hotel, they had walked to the St. Francis, where friends had given them shoes and clothes. The rapidly approaching flames had driven them forth again, and they had spent three nights with thousands of others on the hills beyond the city. . . ."

Just for the record, gentlemen.

REPLY TO A CANADIAN.

Chicago, April 19.—As a soldier in the army of the United States, please allow me to answer a Canadian, J. H. Lawrie, who condemned our military leaders in the April 19 issue of THE TRIBUNE. Certainly we have made mistakes, I readily admit that, but here are my replies to a few of his points.

Mr. Lawrie stated that Pearl Harbor was the greatest sea defeat of all times and that we should have announced our losses promptly. Perhaps he has so soon forgot the combined agony of Norway, Dunkirk, Greece, Crete, and the fall of Singapore with the capture of over 70,000 Empire troops who were to "fight to the finish."

If the United States had released news concerning the damage the Japs did at Pearl Harbor before they did, the Japs might have been able to invade the Hawaiian Islands.

Mr. Lawrie says we blundered at Manila by bunching our planes and thus having them bombed to bits.

This brings back sad memories of Malaya. Remember how the British had to bomb their own hangars and planes after the Japs took a field because the R. A. F. abandoned their slightly damaged planes which were almost wing to wing when the Japs bombed the field?

For the most interesting and enlightening reading of his life, may I suggest to Mr. Lawrie "From Suez to Singapore," by Cecil Brown.

It was in Malaya that British anti-aircraft gunners observed a plane near their position. They called headquarters to ask if any British planes were in the air. The reply was "No" so they proceeded to shoot down a desperately needed R. A. F. Brewster "Buffalo." Mr. Lawrie gave as an example of our blundering the shooting down of United States planes at Gela in Sicily by our own gunners. Stupid and regrettable but any one can do it, even the British.

As to the bombing of a neutral Swiss city by Flying Forts, a few hundred yards difference would have placed the bombs inside Germany. The Swiss accept it as a regrettable accident.

Now that same baby is a prisoner of war in Germany and the Red Cross is again saving his life with weekly food parcels. As a pilot of a Liberator, he was shot down Oct. 1 and has had Red Cross aid ever since. From a returned prisoner on the Gripsholm, I learned all the Germans give them in the way of food is potatoes and black bread. Need one say more about the necessity of giving until it hurts to this life saving Red Cross?

QUOTING CHURCHILL AGAINST ROOSEVELT.

Beverly Hills, Cal., April 16.—Winston Churchill says: "We must beware of trying to build a society in which nobody counts for anything except the politician or the official—a society where enterprise gains no reward and thrift no privileges."

Tho probably unintentional, this is a well phrased indictment of the Roosevelt administration. It expresses the feelings of the intelligent American citizen who is not a payroller or a politician. We must rid ourselves of the New Deal burocracy and regimentation before our so-called public servants become our masters. The time is November 7.

I would like to know how we can combat child delinquency under these circumstances. We have no playgrounds—the prairies are monopolized by victory gardeners—and the park is a mile away.

ILLINOIS C. OF C. URGED TO FAVOR PEORIA VET PLAN

U. S. Opens Office Here to Help Men Get Jobs.

As selective service yesterday announced its opening of headquarters in Cook county to get discharged service men back into industry, 50 representatives of Illinois chambers of commerce last night met in the Palmer House to review the "Peoria plan" for the rehabilitation of those now in service.

Indorsement of the plan as a statewide program was urged by Henry J. Neumiller of Peoria, state chamber president, after its originator, Dr. Harold A. Vonachen, medical director for the Caterpillar Tractor company, had explained the program which is now in effect in his industry.

Vonachen's program entails a community-wide sponsorship of rehabilitation, with emphasis on those who receive a medical or psychiatric discharge. It includes a paid counselor, who records every available job in the community.

1,000 Return to Company.

Citing his own experience, Vonachen said that more than 1,000 handicapped veterans had returned to work for the tractor company and that, as a whole, the production and safety records were above average. Absenteeism was down, he added.

"Unless communities are prepared to absorb the returning veterans," he warned, "you are going to see one of the worst social and political upheavals in the history of our country." He asserted his program should "go all the way down to the corner grocery."

He said his plan was workable in any community, and that it had been adopted "with excellent results," in Madison and Racine, Wis., Zanesville, O., and Bloomington, Ill., "where the city council passed a city ordinance putting this plan into effect."

The program of selective service, which has opened Cook county headquarters at 105 Monroe st., is similar to the "Peoria plan." Altho primarily interested in getting veterans into jobs, the office also will supply information on education, rehabilitation, vocational guidance, claims, and pensions.

Entitled to Former Jobs.

Under the selective training and service act of 1940, men are entitled to return to their former jobs or to a position of like seniority, status, and pay. They must be considered as having been on leave to perform military service.

In the case of federal employes, the law says that discharged veterans shall be employed and congress added that those taken from state or political subdivision jobs also should be reëmployed.

The law further provides that persons drafted from private employment also shall be rehired, but takes into consideration many factors, such as inability of the veteran to perform his former job, or unforeseen conditions which make it impossible or unreasonable for an employer to reinstate the veteran.

The selective service personnel division is interested primarily in those who cannot be reinstated, those who do not desire reinstatement, and those who went into service from school.

Committeemen Aid Vets.

As soon as the returned veteran reports to his local board, as required under law, the machinery for getting him back into industry is set in motion. Each local draft board in Illinois has two volunteer reëmployment committeemen who will try immediately to place the veteran in a job. When this is done, selective service closes its case.

"It is imperative," said Lt. William S. Bishop, supervisor of the Cook county office, "that veterans reapply for their old jobs within 40 days. Otherwise they lose their claim, because under the law the employer no longer is obligated."

Several copies of a separation report, containing all the information about a discharged soldier, are prepared when he returns. One copy is given the veteran, one goes to the adjutant general in Washington to become part of his file, one goes to the veterans' administration, another to his original board of registration, one to the United States employment service, and the sixth copy is sent to the reëmployment committee of the board where the man wants to work.

Will Get Letter of Welcome.

A postage-free card with a letter of welcome will be sent to Cook county veterans from the central office here. The card will ask the veteran to indicate whether he needs assistance, has returned to his old job, or if he needs advice. If aid is needed, he is asked to call for an appointment.

At the central office, a USES placement agent will provide a card of introduction for the veteran to present to his prospective employer and a follow-up file will be kept until the man actually is working.

Young veterans who were students prior to military service and are without claim upon an employer will be aided in obtaining vocational guidance thru coöperation of the Chicago public schools. Those who have been taught trades while in service, but who need additional training before going into industry, also can get this service.

Calls for "Real Help."

"The returned veteran not only deserves the gratitude of the nation, but that gratitude should be shown by real help toward restoring him to his normal place in civilian life as rapidly as possible and with a minimum of effort," said Paul G. Armstrong, Illinois director of selective service.

Lt. Bishop is asking Cook county employers who have jobs for discharged veterans to notify him by letter. About 1,000 men are being returned to Cook county each month.

Arrests of A.W.O.L.'s Reduce Thefts.

BY ROBERT CROMIE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 21.—While American soldiers on the whole are well behaved and disciplined, there are always some who kick over the traces and "go over the hill." The natural mecca of a man who has gone A. W. O. L. is London. There, to the casual observer, he's just another G. I. on a pass and in exceptional circumstances is able to discard his uniform and pose as a civilian.

The A. W. O. L.'s include men who overstay their pass one day to others who have been absent without permission as long as 300 days. Many have admitted supporting themselves by stealing from fellow soldiers, and several privates have been found posing as officers, complete with decorations.

Cut Down Thefts.

Col. Ernest Buhrmaster, former Schenectady, N. Y., attorney who is provost marshal of the greater London area, said one good result of picking up A. W. O. L.'s was the sharp falling off of thefts reported in Red Cross dormitories. He said 242 men had complained from Jan. 1 to April 13 of losing wallets and other valuables while sleeping. Of these thefts, 176 were cleaned up by confessions of a handful of A. W. O. L.'s.

One trio of absentees, the youngest of whom was only 17, admitted having committed 79 thefts. The two older members were found wearing air force officers' uniforms, distinguished flying crosses, and other ribbons stolen from an officers' club. The 17 year old had donned civilian clothes and stowed away on a ship in which he was planning to return home because his two companions had deserted him.

Couldn't Act Like Officer.

When the older men were asked by Lt. Thomas Guidera, former New York City policeman, now heading the criminal investigation department of the United States army in London, why they had left the younger fellow to shift for himself, they said with great indignation: "He acted like a damn pfc. [private first class]. He couldn't even act like an officer." All three were privates.

The "prize" A. W. O. L. was a 23 year old enlisted man. He stole an air force captain's identity card, assumed the latter's name, and with his own hand press printed "orders" promoting himself from lieutenant to captain. Then he "grounded" himself to explain his protracted stay in London.

Added Decorations.

When caught, this fellow had his own apartment, complete with a woman. His decorations included a DFC with a cluster, the air medal with several clusters, the Purple Heart, royal air force wings, the British DFC, and Eagles' squadron insignia.

Col. Buhrmaster said two or three A. W. O. L.'s have been picked up wearing civilian clothes and carrying false British civil identity cards, which are used to obtain work. Lt. Gerald Cantor, the Bronx, N. Y., Guidera's chief assistant, said it is possible to obtain such cards for $20 to $40.

Percentage Small.

Most men, however, apparently have no reason for being A. W. O. L. other than that they have stayed slightly beyond the limit and are afraid to return.

Col. Buhrmaster said on the other hand that he had received many compliments from British civil authorities on the good behavior of American enlisted men, of whom fewer than one in 100 gets into trouble. The Red Cross has safes available in which G. I.'s and officers are told to deposit valuables, so that theft victims have only themselves to blame.

A. W. O. L.'s when caught, face disciplinary action varying from a few days in the guardhouse to long terms in federal prison in the case of those involved in thefts.

Among men working under the provost marshal is Corp. Frank Pause, formerly an attorney of 100 N. La Salle st., Chicago.

TESTS DISCLOSE POISON IN BODY OF MRS. LAWSON

Preliminary laboratory tests have disclosed traces of poison in the body of Bobbie Allen Lawson, 26, Chicago "knockout drop" girl who died mysteriously Wednesday in a St. Louis hotel room, Coroner James J. Fitzsimmons of that city said yesterday. Neither the kind nor the amount of the poison has been determined definitely, he added.

George L. Lawson.

Meanwhile the woman's husband, George L. Lawson, 41, was ordered held under $30,000 bond in federal District court in Cincinnati, O., yesterday on a charge of transporting stolen goods across a state boundary. In asking for the high bail, Assistant United States Atty. Robert E. Marshall told Judge John H. Druffel he wished to assure Lawson's presence for trial May 1 in a case involving theft of $10,000 in merchandise from a store in Lebanon, O., in May, 1942. Lawson, who had been indicted in the Ohio case in February, 1943, was arrested by federal bureau of investigation agents in Cincinnati Thursday. He had disappeared from St. Louis after his wife's death.

A warrant charging Lawson with defrauding a hotel keeper of $33 was issued in St. Louis yesterday.

GAMBLING JURY FINDS WILLIAMS GUILTY OF PLOT

John Joseph Williams, confessed gambler and once acquitted of murder, yesterday was found guilty of conspiracy to corrupt public morals by gambling by a jury of eight women and four men before Judge Harold G. Ward of the Criminal court.

The jury imposed a fine of $2,000, the maximum, but avoided imposing a prison or jail sentence. Under the felony count in the indictment the jury could have imposed a prison sentence up to five years, or, under a misdemeanor count, up to one year in jail, plus, in either case, a fine. Motion for a new trial will be heard May 1.

Co-defendants Acquitted.

The verdict, returned after one hour 10 minutes of deliberation, surprised some observers who had expected an acquittal. This expectation was based to some extent on Thursday's court action when Police Capt. Frank Malone and Detective George Gore of the Chicago Lawn station, who were indicted with Williams, were freed on a directed verdict of not guilty.

Judge Ward ruled the evidence against the policemen was insufficient. Capt. Malone, Detective Gore, and Williams went on trial together Monday. With Malone's and Gore's acquittal, Williams remained on trial alone.

For the state's attorney's office the Williams verdict was the sole reward of its long and costly gambling prosecutions initiated by the October grand jury investigation. It was the only conviction. All other major cases collapsed as a result of court orders and jury verdicts. It is estimated the authorities spent up to $75,000 in the investigations and prosecutions.

Minimizes His Activities.

The final court session, with Williams as the sole defendant remaining out of three, moved swiftly. He called as his chief witnesses his former co-defendants, Capt. Malone and Detective Gore.

His attorney, James M. Burke, asked each one question, "Were you in any conspiracy with Williams?" Each gave one answer, "No."

Williams himself then testified, and admitted that he was a handbook operator, but contended he was a small one.

$44,000 Take Is Cited.

Burke emphasized this point because Williams was accused of conspiracy "to corrupt public morals" by gambling. The public morals question, Burke said, depended on who could afford to go to the tracks.

Asst. State's Atty. Alex Napoli challenged this picture by showing that Williams was no "piker," but a gambler with profits of $44,000 in less than a year of operations.

On his last day in Chicago before being transferred to Washington, D. C., Radioman Joseph Lenoir, 20, United States navy, became the 10 millionth man in uniform entertained at Chicago Service Men's centers—three operated the year around and one in the summer—when he walked into center No. 1 at 176 W. Washington st. yesterday morning. Mrs. Edward J. Kelly presented him with a waterproof watch, which was donated by the Chicago Credit Jewelers group.

Lenoir, who has attended the navy radio technicians' school here for three months, is a veteran of nine months' patrol duty in the Atlantic ocean and European theaters of war. Surprised at his reception and the sudden flash of cameras, Lenoir said: "Out of a revolving door into this. I feel just like Frank Sinatra."

He also was given a phone call to his mother, Mrs. Marie Lenoir, in Baltimore, and he told her about his watch and also what train he'd be home on today. Standing near Mrs. Kelly as she received Lenoir, Yeoman Henry Cristol plucked three roses from a bouquet and presented them to her with this speech: "I'm the 10 millionth and one man. I don't get anything, but I give you these."

LONERGAN TRIAL ATTORNEY GETS 30 DAY SENTENCE

New York, April 21 (AP).—Atty. Edward V. Broderick was sentenced to 30 days in City prison today on a contempt of court charge resulting from his conduct at the start of Wayne Lonergan's murder trial.

General Sessions Judge John J. Freschi granted a 30 day stay to permit Broderick to appeal.

The attorney's conduct resulted in Judge Freschi halting Lonergan's trial and dismissing the jury panel. Lonergan, charged with slaying his heiress wife, Patricia, subsequently was convicted of second degree murder before another judge and sentenced to 35 years to life in prison.

One count of the contempt charge dealt with Broderick's failure to appear when the trial first was scheduled last February.

TRAFFIC SAFETY DRIVE ORDERED AS DEATHS RISE

City and park traffic officials were told yesterday to pay greater attention to traffic violations by both motorists and pedestrians as the result of an increase in traffic deaths, injuries, and minor crashes for the first three and a half months of the year as compared with the same period in 1943.

Lewis Russell, city council traffic engineer, reported to the council committee on traffic and public safety that there were 128 traffic deaths in the city up to April 17, as compared with 103 deaths in the same period last year. Traffic accidents totaled 3,617, an increase of 401 over the same period in 1943.

Persons injured in auto accidents numbered 4,460 this year, compared with 3,901 in the first three and a half months of last year.

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks department will answer questions about the draft and military service, both in the daily columns and by mail, if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are sent with the queries.]

H. I. G. asks: "Will you please quote the paragraph in the directive to the draft boards which stated that men over 26 were not to be inducted in order to meet present quotas or past deficiencies? Does a man who is married, 35 years old, and now employed in an essential war industry, who has had his physical and ordered to report for induction May 1 have to report?"

ANSWER: The matter of delaying the induction of men over 26 is covered in state memorandums issued subsequent to Gen. Hershey's telegram. For Illinois it is covered in State Memo 780, paragraph 2: "Effective April 12, local boards are directed to postpone the induction of men who became 26 years of age on or before March 24, 1944, who are making a contribution to essential agriculture, war production, or war-supporting activities even tho such men have been found acceptable for military service or have been ordered to report for induction. . . . Registrants who are not making a contribution in such activities are to be inducted." Some local boards insist that when a registrant is engaged in any activity not in war production, agriculture, or in support of the war, it is up to the local board to determine, subject to appeal, if his activity is "making a contribution" to the war. As far as this order is concerned, we are told, the local boards can still call men over 26 if they are nonfathers if needed, and if all nonfathers have been inducted, selective service representatives insist that fathers can be called if needed. This seems entirely contradictory to the meaning and intent of the memorandum and Gen. Hershey's order.

It is further stated in this memorandum: "Making a contribution does not mean that a registrant must be engaged in an 'essential occupation.' If he is employed in an establishment in 'war production' or in a 'war-supporting activity,' he is deemed to be making a contribution to the war effort." In your case, it would appear that your local board should issue a stay of induction but if it doesn't, do not fail to report for induction. The state director apparently is the only person in authority to determine if a particular local board such as yours has exhausted all single men under 26, all married men under 26, and all fathers under 26 before demanding you report for induction. We cannot understand why it is left entirely to the discretion of the local board to determine who and what is "making a contribution to the war effort"—but so the order reads.

K. W. P. writes: "I submitted application last March [1943] for an over-age discharge which was disapproved. I am now under a different commanding officer, who is willing to release me but we are not sure how to proceed. What is the authority for this type of discharge and how do we proceed?"

ANSWER: Your previous rejection settled the case. It cannot be reopened because the authority previously existing has been revoked, and the only men who may still apply are those "who did not have proper opportunity to apply," and this would mean men beyond means of communication such as in the jungles or then "missing," etc. You had proper opportunity.

BETTER METHOD FOR TEACHING OF HISTORY URGED

Use of Newspapers Recommended.

St. Louis, Mo., April 21—[Special].—Improved methods of teaching American history, with a view to making it more interesting to students, were urged today at the annual meeting of the Mississippi Valley Historical association. Some 500 historians and educators are attending the conference.

The program of improvement would embrace revised texts, better teachers, and more "mature" history teaching for college students. Dr. Edgar Wesley of the University of Minnesota called attention to the frequent "indiscriminating assignment" of unqualified persons to teach history.

Use of Newspapers Urged.

Use of newspapers, radio, and other modern aids was recommended to supplement formal text books. It was held these media would provide a more rounded vision of American life.

At the morning session the historians went in lighter vein into episodes in the life of pioneer Americans who have become a part of middle western folklore.

In a paper entitled, "She Laid Her Pistol Down," Clarence S. Paine of Beloit college in Wisconsin told the story of "Calamity Jane." Martha Jane Canary was her name and she obtained her nickname after she had saved an army officer's life during an Indian raid in the Black Hills. The officer called her "a wonderful woman to have around in time of calamity."

Female Robin Hoods.

Later dime novels and pamphlets depicted her as a female Robin Hood in a spotless suit of white buckskin. Paine opined that this picture should be debunked; that Jane was "never noted for sartorial perfection."

William Francis English of the University of Missouri discussed pioneer lawyers. He decried the depiction of them as better with the bottle and the pistol than with their law books. They achieved leadership in politics, English said, because there was no governmental class on the frontiers and were better able, because of their education, to speak for the people.

COLONEL TERMS WRIGHT EXPOSE "ALL THE BUNK"

Cincinnati, O., April 21 (AP).—Lt. Col. Frank C. Greulich told a court martial today that he regarded complaints about practices in the Lockland plant of the Wright Aeronautical corporation as "the work of disgruntled inspectors" and "all the bunk."

Col. Greulich, who was relieved of his post as chief inspection officer of the army air forces materiel command following a Truman committee investigation, testified in his own defense in the military trial of himself and two other AAF officers on charges of neglect of duty and conspiracy to let the company dominate inspection.

The other defendants are Maj. Walter A. Ryan, former central states inspection officer, and Maj. William Bruckmann, former AAF representative in the plant.

Col. Greulich said he relied on reports by Millard Clark and Ray Bond, AAF technical director for all Wright plants, whom he quoted as saying "conditions were satisfactory."

GASOLINE ALLEY

NOTHING WRONG WITH CONGRESS, EDITORS TOLD

BY WILLIAM MOORE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 21.—"There's nothing the matter with congress that a good election would not cure," Rep. Halleck [R., Ind.] told the American Society of Newspaper Editors tonight.

Halleck was one of a group of members of the senate and the house who met with the society to discuss the movement for streamlining congressional procedure.

"There is too much of wanting to make things over," Halleck said. "Congress is streamlined. As to who's responsible for the lack of coöperation between the executive and congress, I leave it to you. Maybe we need some good public relations man. Everybody else in Washington has them."

Hold Joint Session.

The society, holding its 22d annual meeting, held a joint session with the members of congress in the congressional caucus room, where simplification of procedure and better technical facilities for congress were considered in the lights of its revolt against the encroachment of the executive power.

Sen. La Follette [Prog., Wis.] proposed this plan for the senate: Reduce the standing committees from 33 to 13, eight of them policy committees and five administrative in function.

The policy committees would be agriculture; fighting forces; finance and monetary affairs; foreign relations; interior, natural resources and public works; interstate commerce; judiciary; labor and public welfare.

Administrative committees would be appropriations, expenditures in executive departments, rules and administration of the senate, claims, and District of Columbia.

Other Proposals.

Sponsors of the plan say the house could be similarly organized. Other proposals of the evening were: that selection of committee chairmen by seniority be abolished, that members of the cabinet be entitled to speak from the senate and house floors and be required to answer questions in either chamber, and that the technical staffs of committees be expanded.

Roberts said one of the primary duties of the American press must be to guard their rights to attend and report on the peace conferences after the war. He also urged a strong effort for the free interchange of news between countries in the post-war world.

ASKS AID 4 DAYS AFTER SHOOTING.

Joseph Castro, 35, of 139 W. 46th st., a press operator, who told police he was shot by an unidentified man at Wentworth av. and Swan st. last Monday, was removed to Bridewell hospital yesterday after he called at Provident hospital for treatment.

Women in War Work

By Dorothy Johnson

As the current SPAR enlistment drive draws to a close, the coast guard announces it is seeking qualified SPARS and recruits for special training courses leading to the rating of radio technician. A school for pre-radio instruction of SPARS will be designated as soon as a sufficient number of qualified women sign up.

This is a new, specialized field for women reservists. The training will include the pre-radio course, a subsequent primary course, and for women who successfully complete the latter, an advance course in radio maintenance, including special equipment.

All women selected for the instruction must first take the regular six weeks' basic training at the coast guard station in Palm Beach, Fla.

Manual dexterity is required of SPARS who would qualify for radio technicians' training. Experience in the operation of "ham" radio sets is helpful. Capacity for intensive study is necessary.

Information about this new phase of SPAR training may be obtained at recruiting headquarters, 53 W. Jackson blvd.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Peabody, volunteer chairman of the Red Cross Gray Lady hospital and recreation corps, urges as many eligible women as possible to register for the next training course of the corps, May 2 thru May 16. Applications for enrollment will be received thru Tuesday, at headquarters, 529 S. Wabash av.

There will be five two-hour sessions of training, to be held in several places in Chicago. Women between the ages of 22 and 60 are eligible. Gray Ladies read to patients, write their letters, supervise their games and other convalescence recreation, and care for flowers in both military and civilian hospitals.

Registration also may be made by phoning Wabash 7850, extension 160.

Two WACs are among the 10 assigned to Company B, WAC detachment, Fort Sheridan, to duties in the recruit reception center. They are Pvt. Benny Aaron, 9236 Perry av., and Pvt. Willa McCarge, 3751 Giles av. The women recently completed basic training at Fort Des Moines, Ia.

Two Chicagoland army nurses on duty at Gardiner General hospital, were promoted from 2d to 1st lieutenants this week. They are Evelyn E. Westerberg, whose home is at 7723 St. Lawrence av., and Bernice E. Houdenschoug, 9329 54th av., Oaklawn.

BY MARY MEADE.

Children's birthday parties can be fun for parents as well as youngsters. A wise hostess will serve small guests the kind of food they are accustomed to eating, but dress it up so it won't seem everyday. Here are some suggestions for party "frills."

For a very young child's birthday cake: Make a "cake" of three layers of gelatin, different flavors. Dust with powdered sugar on outside to resemble frosting. Decorate outer rim of plate with candles in marshmallows.

Stand up animals: Stick animal cookies into position in fudge that has just been poured into a pan. When hard, cut into narrow pieces between each animal. [Be certain candy is permitted in guests' diets!]

Ship desserts: Pour gelatin into glass sherbet dishes. Just before it begins to thicken, place a section of grapefruit or orange in the center. Make a paper sail and insert it into the fruit with a tooth pick.

Cup cakes: Ice cakes and decorate with a pastry tube or small candles, by printing the names of guests on cakes. Arrange on a large tray. Each child is pleased to find his name in print.

Sandwiches: Arrange sandwiches that have been made in special shapes, colors, and fillings in baskets.

Forgotten birthday present: Any child will enjoy getting a shiny apple with pennies, nickels or dimes stuck into it. [Wash coins and boil to sterilize.] Tie a bow on the stem of the apple.

Maypole cake: Plan a cake to be decorated with a peppermint candy maypole and pastel ribbon streamers. Bake the cake in a tube pan, ice it, and put plenty of frosting in the center opening to hold a large stick of red and white peppermint candy. Before the icing is firm, set the pole in the icing and run ribbons across the cake, crossing over the top of the pole. Little candy flowers can hold the ribbon ends in place.

Kitchen Pointers

By Mary Meade

"Catsup is so high in points I don't feel I can use it in my shrimp cocktail sauce. What could I use instead?" a reader telephoned yesterday.

A can of tomato soup is only 4 points, compared with 16 points for the smallest bottle of catsup or chili sauce, so I suggest using tomato soup as the cocktail sauce base. Blend it undiluted with about a third as much mayonnaise, and season with lemon juice, a tablespoon of horseradish, a little Worcestershire sauce, and a few drops of tabasco.

I don't know why the sudden interest in cream puffs, but the cooking department has had so many requests for cream puff recipes this week that we've decided to take pictur s of cream puffs for some Wednesday soon.

A dozen or more readers have called us to ask whether we didn't forget the baking powder in the spiced raisin squares which appeared in last Wednesday's picture recipe. No, we didn't. There isn't supposed to be baking powder in them, for they're a moist, chewy cooky, not a cakelike one. By the way, they're fine for packing in a soldier's gift box.

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MAC KAY

You Wonder.

You often wonder if other people do the absurd things you do; if they take down notes on the back of an envelope, toss it away, and lose the notes forever and a day. . . . Or if they call a number, go wool-gathering while the operator makes the connection, and then forget, when disconnected, the number they called.

You sometimes wonder if other women rush to the grocery to return home laden with an armload of things they never intended to buy —without the one thing for which they went. . . . Or if they spend a noon hour selecting a hat, wear it twice, then hide it away, guiltily, so the family won't inquire, "Whatever became of that new hat?"—and all because some one remarked "It's smart . . . it's chic all right . . . but it does add years, doesn't it?"

Do We All?

You are curious as to whether other white collar girls, in an elevator, absent-mindedly call the wrong floor and, unable to brook the hostile stares of fellow passengers, alight at the 12th floor instead of the 14th—and then stealthily run up two flights of stairs. . . . You weigh the possibility of your feminine co-workers feeling happy because some gay miscreant pays them an extravagant compliment . . . You ponder the idea of their having a glorious time at a dull party for no other reason than that a becoming dress wraps them in an aura of irresistibility.

Do all commuters, you wonder, make a dash for the inside seat on the train just because they feel cozier in a corner? . . . Do more stalwart hearts sink with a thud [as does yours] when an inflexible head waiter leads the way to a table right square in the center of the room when there is a nice little table for two over by the wall?

Do all white collar girls feel low as a snail if greeted, on a rainy morning, with a glum glance but birdlike chirp merely because some one says "Hi!" . . . "H'lo" . . . or "Honey" in an I-like-you tone?

Could Be.

You wonder if your sisters under the whim answer the telephone chokily on the Sunday morning they slept late to say: "O, goodness no! You didn't waken me! I've been up for hours!" . . . If they complain of a headache when it's a heartache, or a stomach ache when it's a soul ache? . . . You wonder if they dote on bangly bracelets [for themselves] and loathe them on any other woman alive. . . . If they feel stiff and formal after a hair set and hope to high heaven they don't meet a soul on the avenue until they reach a mirror and a comb.

You wonder if most white collar girls never have a white collar—have blue, yellow, green, and lavender collars but nary a white one. . . . If they never can find time to get their shoes repaired. . . . If they steal a glance at themselves in store windows just to see how they're weathering the war and—on these late April days when the ground smells moist and sweet—they feel a sharp jab to the heart that could be—spring!

In Storage 7 Years, Barnard Statues to Emerge at Kankakee

After seven years in a storeroom of a Kankakee school, the $100,000 collection of original casts of the work of the late George Grey Barnard, New York sculptor, soon will go on exhibit, it was announced yesterday.

Mr. Barnard, who spent his boyhood in Kankakee, donated the collection to the city in March, 1937, shortly before his death. Since then the statues, many of them nine feet tall, have reposed in a storeroom of the Central school, while it was debated whether the nude figures would form a proper exhibit for the average onlooker.

Some of the statues were in need of restoration, which recently was brought about by a group of club women. Then arrangements were completed to exhibit the statues in the Central school.

BY CLAUDIA CASSIDY.

The most dangerous thing about unwise exploitation of a young singer is that it hurts the singer. Last night the Metropolitan Opera staged "Mignon" at the Civic Opera house and tho as "Mignon" goes it had a good deal of charm and sparkle, particularly from Beecham in the pit, the evening's chief lure, the reason the house was sold out, centered in an 18 year old soprano, Patrice Munsel. Miss Munsel had been signed to a fabulous contract by an astute impresario before any one ever heard of her, and he gave her the works. So when she walked on the stage last night she was not just a youngster trying to earn the right to be there, but a prima donna given circus billing as the coloratura find of the decade. The result was a fiasco.

Not at first, because Miss Munsel has real talent. She is pretty, and what is more, piquant. She has the figure to wear exquisite clothes and the charm to captivate attention. In the first act and the first scene of the second act, she had great promise. Her voice suggested a coloratura of size and brilliance, a genuine relief from the current crop who sound like Minnie Mouse. She even had authority. In a small role she would have had a success.

But no. That was not enough. She was singing Philine, and to Philine's lot falls that lilting showpiece, the Polonaise. Miss Munsel not only did not sing it, she murdered it. She lost her way in its labyrinths, which was excusable. But she utterly lacked the technique that would have given her the right to sing it, and that was inexcusable. The fact that a kind-hearted audience came warmly to the rescue could not disguise the flat fact of failure.

Well, perhaps the next time will be wiser, and better. Meanwhile, had all of "Mignon" lived up to Beecham's overture, it would have been a gallant opera. He gave the orchestra fire, high spirits, and elegance and danced both the gavotte and the polonaise with the deft fingers of his blithe left hand. The staging was not quite on this level, for all the Chicago Opera's ornate settings and some splendid costumes. It lost many a point in action, and permitted Miss Browning's not too convincing Frederic to prink like a girl.

Miss Tourel's Mignon was musical, often beautifully sung, but not pictorially convincing as the waif who wins her man from a minx. Mr. Melton was a handsome Wilhelm Meister with a good voice which will be better in the role when he has more style. Mr. Lazzari sang a richly poetic Lothario, substituting for Mr. Pinza, who is still indisposed, and Donald Dame, a newcomer, was amusing in the mock heroics of Laertes, the actor. Slashing cuts had been made in the score, perhaps to make the evening move faster, tho a 30 minute intermission wasted much of the time thus saved. But it was pleasant they found space for Marina Svetlova's dancing, which retains its old ballet skill in the opera.

Institute Conducted on Rehabilitation in Blind Relief Cases

Evelyn C. McKay, social research secretary of the American Foundation for the Blind, New York City, yesterday conducted the first of a series of institutes thru which the Illinois public aid commission hopes to aid blind relief cases to help themselves. Fifty staff members of the Cook county bureau of public welfare were present. The session was held at the public aid commissioner's headquarters, 160 N. La Salle st.

More than 6,100 blind relief cases were on the commission's rolls for April, and the estimated cost of relief at approximately $30 a case, is $189,825 for the month. The funds are administered by county departments of public assistance, except in Cook county.

Many cases can be helped toward self-support if county workers are informed on rehabilitation methods, Raymond M. Hilliard, state director, said. Some cases may even be cured and the state commission will pay for some necessary operations, Mr. Hilliard said.

Election Finally Over, D. A. R. Congress Ends

BY IRENE STEYSKAL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 21.—The turbulent 53d continental congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which generally, if unofficially, has been termed the "congress of confusion," belatedly closed today in a calm restored only by exhaustion. Delegates had trekked to the voting machines four times—twice today—before a complete staff of officers had been elected to serve with Mrs. Julius Young Talmadge of Georgia, new president general.

Mrs. Samuel James Campbell of Mount Carroll, Ill., defeated by Mrs. Talmadge in the warmly contested race for president general, helped to ease the deadlock by announcing the withdrawal of those of her running mates whose election had not been determined after the second vote. The withdrawal, also after the second balloting, of the ticket of Mrs. George D. Schermerhorn, Reading, Mich., gave a free field to the remaining candidates running with Mrs. Talmadge.

Cabinet officers elected on the third vote this morning were: Mrs. C. Edward Murray, Trenton, N. J., 2d vice president general; Mrs. Willard Steele, Chattanooga, Tenn., chaplain general; Mrs. Frederick Palmer Lattimer, New London, Conn., corresponding secretary general; Mrs. Roscow C. O'Bryne, Brookville, Ind., registrar general; Mrs. Frank Edgar Lee, Santa Monica, Cal., historian general; Mrs. Frederick G. Smith, Somerville, Mass., librarian general, and Mrs. William Horsfall, Marshville, Ore., representative general to the Smithsonian institution.

Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke of Washington, D. C., also was placed on the board of managers as a vice president general in the third vote. It required a fourth ballot to seat Mrs. Charles Blackwell Keesee of Martinsville, Va., on the board as a vice president general.

Four other vice presidents general were elected on the first vote to fill board vacancies.

All newly elected officers were inducted at simplified ceremonies of investiture late this afternoon before the colors were retired from the hall at the close of the congress. Planned originally as a four day meeting, the congress, because of the election, had run thru the fifth day.

The board of managers went into conference following the congress' adjournment. Mrs. J. Deforest Richards, state regent of Illinois, has invited the national society to return to Chicago for its 54th congress next year. It was in Chicago that the precedent breaking 51st congress of the D. A. R. was held when war conditions made it necessary to move the annual meeting from Constitution hall in Washington, D. C.

Thru the Looking Glass

One of the things you see fairly frequently but perhaps don't pay a great deal of attention to is the powder bar. If you waft past these with unseeing eyes you're making a mistake, because there is beauty-gold for you in those big jars of face powder in a variety of tints.

The powder shades may scare you; the green, lavender, yellow, cream, and various nuances of beige may make you feel that the net result would be much too theatrical for your simple tastes. But you'd be mistaken.

Every woman's skin tone has an astonishing number of different tints in it. It's the job of the expert behind the blending bar to identify the various tints that make your individual skin tone different from every other woman's and to toss up a powder for you that blends perfectly with the tint of your complexion. You'd be surprised at how completely wrong you yourself can be in your slap dash method of choosing a powder tint. And once you get a lovely shade that accents the beauteous tints in your skin and perhaps camouflages some that are not so handsome you'll be delighted at the difference it makes.

When powder is properly blended just for you, with your own skin tone variations taken into consideration, your makeup is smoother and far more suave. You won't look powdered—and that's the ultimate in really slick face makeup. Your skin tone is even, becoming; the texture of your skin even looks different. You don't have shine, but neither do you have the obvious film of powder that makes skin look ancient.

A dash of beige, a touch of apricot, perhaps a smidge of lavender, and an extra teaspoon of cream shade mixed with rachel may be just what you need. You never know until you try it, and once you find the perfect shade you're sold on it.

Give Children Some Freedom in the Home

[Copyright: 1944: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

The orgy of housecleaning was over, thank goodness. The family hadn't minded the inconveniences too much. In fact, the members had been coöperative — eating sketchy meals in the kitchen, and the children did their homework in rooms crowded with furniture in disarray.

Now everything was spick and span, a joy to behold. At least that is what the mistress of the house thought, but the others secretly wished the whole thing had never been started. The upholstery mustn't be marred, chairs and tables mustn't be moved or pushed around, and it was a cardinal sin to leave a finger print on the woodwork—yes, even in your own bedroom.

"The place will be a wreck within two weeks if I don't keep after every one of you almost every minute," scolded their mother. The children felt fenced in by admonitions. Their activities were blocked by their mother's delight in or, I should say, reverence for cleanliness and order.

Material things, cleanliness and order are veritable obsessions with some women. And how utterly miserable it can make their families! Their husbands may growl and protest with some success, but the children, being children, are real victims. Yet when these mothers have trouble with their children, they wonder and complain.

Your house won't be a wreck if you give your children the reasonable freedom of it. You'll have temporary disorder, I'll admit, while they play with their toys. You're bound to have some mud on your floors if they rush in to show you something, or tell you about something thrilling they've accomplished or witnessed. And, of course, you'll have finger prints here and there, because no normal healthy child has clean hands all of the time. You won't have a house that is in a perpetual state of order and cleanliness, but neither will your home be an uninhabitable wreck—not by a long shot!

Why? Because using a house doesn't mean destroying it. Temporary disorder doesn't mean permanent disarrangement. Freedom doesn't mean going berserk.

You'll find the child who has the freedom of his home, intelligently guided, is a much better disciplined personality than the one who never can do anything in his own house because everything in it is more important than his comfort and happiness. Let your child know that it is his home, too, and that he has a perfect right to enjoy it and really live in it just as have his grownups.

INSTALMENT XLII.

OVER NIAGARA FALLS IN A BARREL.

Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur now were keeping friendly eyes upon Barrymore during such times as he took recess from the sanitarium or his preoccupations with Miss Barrie. I myself had gone to Damascus to buy a sword in May of 1935, and returned to Los Angeles early next year to learn from Hecht and MacArthur that our friend was subsisting on one can of beer a day. I was told by the playwrights that Jack seldom received any one in private other than his new mentors. They added that Barrymore, when informed by them that his present romance could be seen almost daily in big journalistic headlines, seemed amazed, then splendidly detached about the whole business.

Whenever Barrymore asked, "What has become of all the money I've made?" his tone was not that of a man rooked at the gaming table. He never cried out to excite a pity that he would have despised, or to inspire a mercy that he neither expected nor desired. But bills sailed like confetti thru the air, and, oddly enough, here was a man who wanted to owe no one a cent.

Perhaps, even at his own rate of spending, he thought it strange that yammerings so often rose all about him concerning his lack of funds. He had made $2,600,000 during his first 10 years in Hollywood. The days of his fabulous contracts now were done; still, he would earn another half million dollars, $3,100,000 in all. He sometimes went to work when half dead, with only his stout spirit to sustain him on the motion picture set, the stage, or at the radio microphone.

It is a curious thing to observe that while he had invested in a few great luxuries, such as his yachts, his house, his hobbies, he spent comparatively little on himself in the sense of personal maintenance. He cared not at all for clothes. He didn't own a watch. He wore no rings. He entertained infrequently. He much preferred to eat a herring in the kitchen or, if possible, in some friend's kitchen, to sitting in costly fashion at a restaurant table.

To be sure, he had drunk much in his time—640 barrels of "hard stuff" during his last 40 years, according to an estimate made by Dr. Hugo Kersten—but even so he was not a connoisseur of wines. Indeed he had a beachcomber's taste for the cheaper grades of liquor, and now his physical tolerance for alcohol had become so slight that he drank far less than was believed of him.

He once had had a large capacity for drink, but by 1936 a few ounces would affect him noticeably. Many, many times he was accounted drunk when the fact was that he was ill, genuinely ill, yet kept doggedly to his feet when a less spirited man would have been whimpering for the doctor and the priest in the same hot breath.

We had come to call Jack "The Monster." If any one is so stupidly dull as to think this was not said with affection, and is not being recorded here with affection, then . . . but why should one explain such things?

In November, with Jack preparing to do "Maytime" in support of vocalists Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, he suddenly decided to elope with Miss Barrie. MacArthur and Hecht sought to dissuade him from this enterprise. They gave a long list of reasons why he should not, at 54, again draw on the bee keeper's veil of matrimony.

After the earnest and perspiring lecturers paused, a pair of Clarence Darrows at the close of a summation, Jack said slowly and with finality: "Gentlemen, you are talking to a man who is about to go over Niagara Falls in a barrel!"

The next day he flew with Miss Barrie and Atty. Sapiro to Yuma, Ariz., to be married to her there by a justice of the peace.

A public skirmish occurred between the husband and wife at midnight of Dec. 31 at the Trocadero, rendezvous of Hollywood's élite. Barrymore's name callings, directed at his young mate, rose above the happier sounds made by celebrants of the New Year of 1937, the popping of wine corks, the tootling of toy horns, the voices of cinematic stars singing "Auld Lange Syne."

Five hours after this set-to, Barrymore telephoned to Atty. Henry Huntington. This good barrister was but slightly acquainted with his early morning telephonist. Nor was he at this time one of the actor's admirers.

Huntington, however, listened to Barrymore's announcement that his wife had left him, and that she was contemplating the filing of a divorce complaint. She had gone alone to their rented home at 1020 Benedict canyon, where the Barrymores, Mrs. Jacobs, and three servants had been residing.

The reluctant attorney went at dawn to the Kelley establishment, there to learn that Jack knew nothing of his recent business affairs, and that Aaron Sapiro still had Barrymore's power of attorney.

On Jan. 2, 1937, Huntington appeared early at the courthouse to file a revocation of Sapiro's power of attorney. Then "things" commenced to happen. Creditors began to pound for immediate payment of bills. Huntington's records show $161,503.82 debts outstanding, including the mortgage of $40,000 on the Infanta. The actor had signed a paper for this lien on his yatch on Aug. 6, 1936, the debt payable one year from date at 7 per cent interest. He now told Huntington, however, that he had no memory of having done this. The list of recent unpaid bills for the seven weeks of his fourth marriage amounted to $10,108.90, of which $511.83 appeared to have been spent on himself.

On Feb. 16 Huntington filed in Jack's behalf a petition, under section 74 of the bankruptcy act. He represented to the court that his client had physical assets on land and on sea worth $261,597.05. It was indicated that all Barrymore sought of his creditors was time for a proper liquidation, so that he might pay his debts dollar for dollar.

It was almost two years before these claims eventually reached settlement, and the bankruptcy court honorably discharged the debtor. Barrymore paid in all $111,503.82; then, in accord with his hole in the pocket philosophy, he went deeply in debt again.

This Skating and Dance Film Is Entertaining

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

Belita grows on you.

In her first scenes she is stiff and entirely unimpressive and you say to yourself, "O, me! . . ." But as soon as she lands on familiar stamping grounds, which are the dance floor and the skating arena—notably the latter—she sheds her awkward mantle of camera consciousness and exhibits a gracious and vibrant personality. After all—what wonder? For it is as a skater that she has won a reputation.

In this unremarkable little story she plays a refugee and makes her first appearance as a waitress in a swank western resort. . . . Here she attracts the notice—as the picture shall show you—of the harried manager of the hotel's entertainment program who is up a tree because the feminine member of a dance team has decided suddenly to marry and leave the act . . .

Belita, having shyly admitted that she has both danced and skated publicly, is hustled into the deserter's gowns and role, makes good and, besides, causes the heart of the entertainment boss [James Ellison] to do a flop. As hers flops likewise, there seems no reason why two shouldn't decide to marry and live as one. But the boss is one of those noble birds . . . He feels that Belita is entitled to her career. . . . So he speeds her on her way—and many a long day—filled with triumphs for Belita and discouragements for her discoverer pass before the two are united.

Belita is featured in several beautiful skating routines and Frick and Frack, the comedy ice experts, entertain amusingly. James Ellison, Walter Catlett, and others provide some smooth acting.

See you tomorrow.

Looking at Hollywood . . . . . By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., April 21. — The party for Fibber McGee and Molly was a memorable affair in the annals of our social life. All tinsel and superficialities that usually attend a Hollywood function were absent. It was as tho every one there was paying homage to "Mr. and Mrs. America," the characters Jim and Marian Jordan have created in "Fibber McGee and Molly." With all the big money spent on the star system in our village, and the belief by producers and radio directors that they must have celebrated names, it was refreshing to suddenly realize that top ratings don't go to the star system, but rather to the homey, unassuming folks — the kind that all of us have known and loved, and the sort that has made our country great. When Jim and Marian stepped forward to receive their gift, two Aberdeen Angus heifers for their ranch, the smiles on their faces were as spontaneous as a child viewing his first Christmas tree. No posing or dramatics. Yes, Hollywood can take a lesson from Fibber McGee and Molly.

She's a Smart Girl.

It didn't take long for Red Skelton to switch from blonde Muriel Morris to a redhead who is just as friendly with Red's Edna as Red is. . . . Susanna Foster of Universal is on the verge of a suspension. She may not do "San Diego, I Love You." Isn't that a silly title? . . . Well, well. Sonny Tufts will star in "Miss Susie Slagle." . . . Universal received a note from an English boy asking for a photograph of Gloria Jean, because he wanted something nice to look at. . . . All studios have a picture for Olivia de Havilland, but will any of them have the nerve to hire her before that court appeal comes thru? . . . J. P. McEvoy is telling Frank Case at the Algonquin he's given up cigars and he's going to Havana, Cuba, to live. "And I suppose," said Frank, "that when you go to heaven you'll throw away your wings."

Flowers That Bloom, Tra La.

More rumors from New York that all was not well between Nick Schenck and Louis B. Mayer, with Louis leaving the company. Well, I knew that would never happen. Yes, there was a row, but all is sweet and lovely now, and Papa Louis got his way. He can outwait anybody, and if you do that, you'll always win. Speaking of Metro, the burlesque on "Mairzy Doats," which concerns the brass hats at that studio, praised three leading musicians there, but spoke ill of all producers. That would lead one to the conclusion that it was done by some one in the music department — and it ain't funny, McGee. . . . Cecil De Mille is off to Little Rock, Ark., to return Dr. Wassell to his home town with the picture of his life. . . . Isn't it "painting the lily" for Bob Benchley to do a narration job on "Road to Utopia" with Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, and Dorothy Lamour? O, me.

News of the Sets.

Hedy Lamarr is loving every minute of "The Conspirators," even tho they're doing most of the picture over since Jack Chertok took over from Hal Wallis. Jack, who always had it, stayed at Metro for 18 years without getting his chance. At Warners' he's doing "The Conspirators" and "The Corn Is Green." . . . Hedy's figure is something to pant about. She claims it's because of happiness. She'll be glad when her Metro contract expires in October, and she can free lance. Her "assistants," who're always with her, stand on her dressing table as little figurines—a wise old owl for her English teacher; her hair dresser, a caterpillar; a skunk for Hedy; Ferdinand for makeup man; and a seal for her wardrobe girl. She's surrounded by Sydney Greenstreet, Peter Lorre, Vladimir Sokoloff, Carol Thurston, and Victor Francen, all thinking up diabolical things to do to her and all funny. Happy to see Gertrude Astor on the set. There, too, was Carmel Myers making another comeback. I asked if she was doing a Sarah Bernhardt — planning a comeback every year for at least 20.

As the Rose.

There's a bloom on Ann Sheridan I've never seen there before, and cute, giggling Jane Wyman makes a nice sidekick for her in "Doughgirls." Ann came across an ad in a paper and pasted it up on her mirror. It ran, "Secrets of Love and Marriage." Underneath, "Sex Quiz." We got on the subject of Mexico, and the beautiful things Paulette Goddard brought home from the museum down there. I asked Ann to let me see her collection. She said, "Hedda, are you kidding? I didn't visit the museum." . . . Director Jim Kern told me how Eve Arden got the Russian part. She was on the lot doing another picture and called up wanting to test for the part, but Jim, who'd known her for years, said, "Eve, dear, you're not the type." Next day Eve dressed up as the Russian, came on the set, spoke in dialect, and the part was hers—which shows even experienced actresses have to beg for parts they want.

See What I Mean?

Jane Powell will do "Snow White" on the air. Speaking of that, a note from a Washington war worker tells me she's seen "Snow White" three times since it was re-issued. "Nothing," says she, "has taken my mind so completely away from this mad city." . . . Congratulations to Shirley Temple. Tomorrow's her birthday. . . . If you haven't read Edwin V. Westrate's "Forward Observer," you'd better do it. If you can buy a copy. It's a fascinating story of the war—every bit true.

Christian High School Choirs Are Heard by Good Sized Audience

The Chicago Christian High School and Alumnae A Cappella choirs shared a program before a good sized audience at Orchestra hall last night. James Baar directed both groups.

The Alumnae choir [all feminine, in case you've forgotten your Latin] delivered pleasantly but without much variety the first part of the program, devoted to music of Handel, Tchesnokoff, Arensky, and others.

Greater scope was possible and realized with the larger high school group of mixed voices. Mr. Baar is to be commended on his sensible decision never to force or distort the adolescent voices at his command. If he thus limits his range of colors, he at the same time preserves a desirable naturalness, and what is still more important, preserves the tender vocal equipment of his choristers.

His chorus sang modestly well. Immature voices found difficulty in realizing the clarity essential to an adequate account of such polyphonic music as De Victoria's "O Magnum Mysterium," and while it was interesting to hear Brahms' setting of the Fifty-first Psalm, it is music whose depths can only be suggested by youth. Much better was Tchesnokoff's "Salvation Is Created," and best of all that happened in our presence was Randall Thompson's fine "Alleluia."

Unannounced on the program, Algerd Brazis, baritone, sang "The Lord's Prayer," Foster's "My Journey's End" and Manna Zucca's "I Love Life."

Musical Sorority Will Initiate Mme. Albanese

In a ceremony at 4 p. m. today in the Drake hotel, Mme. Licia Albanese of the Metropolitan Opera company will be initiated into Sigma Alpha Iota, musical sorority.

Here Are New Gift Ideas for Men in Service

BY REA SEEGER.

It's no idle boast that sleuthing shoppers can find anything and everything in Chicago shops and stores. From art treasures to new plastic zippers you pay your money and take your choice. Clothes, hats, and accessories fresh from the creators are routine. Jewelry and all the newest ideas in war time fabrics, bags, gloves, blouses, and all the new cottons arrive almost daily. And now, timed exactly right for the girls they left behind, come the clever new items to mail the lads in uniform.

Since there are definite limits and rules about overseas shipments, the whole project assumes the proportions of an obstacle game. If the man in your life is in the navy, you can send up to five pounds without a specified request. Of course the outline size is under control, too. Soldiers overseas rate a gift box [the limit is five pounds] only with a special request which is to be stamped by the postoffice staff. But there are ways to remember the lad without this request. Anything under four ounces is acceptable without the written note, and there are two ideal gifts under the four ounce rulings.

One is the candy treat package, a flat affair with a good candy mixture of soft and chewy chocolates. Inside is a large single sheet of writing paper, and with small writing, lots can be written. The package is all wrapped and ready to seal with sticky tape after the note has been written. The cost is around a quarter. First class postage should be 24 cents, then it goes just like a letter. The second item is the 10 razor blade pamphlet. It is of stiff, sturdy cardboard, with the 10 blades snugly attached to the back sheet. There are two large and two small side flaps for messages. Sealed they go for 6 cents. The razor blades have a grand trade-in value, if the man has enough blades of his own.

According to Culbertson

(Copyright: 1944: By Ely Culbertson.)

The affection that some players shower on honor cards is touching, but it is not conducive to sound bridge. Observe East's emotionalism in the following deal.

NORTH
♠ K 7 5 3
♥ K 6 2
♦ 9
♣ K 9 5 3 3

WEST
♠ 9
♥ J 9 3

♣ J 10 7 4

EAST
♠ Q J 6 4 2
♥ Q 7
♣ A Q 6

SOUTH
♠ A 10 8
♥ A 10 8 5 4

♣ 8

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 heart	Pass
2 clubs	Pass	2 diamonds	Pass
3 hearts	Pass	4 hearts [final bid]

North's three heart bid was a stretch, even tho there was some logic in his effort to show "better than a preference."

West opened his singleton spade. Dummy played low, East put in the jack, and South won. The singleton club was then led to the king; East won and returned a spade. West ruffed, but this did not bother the declarer inasmuch as he always would have had to lose a spade trick. West, to prevent diamond ruffing, now led the nine of trumps. Declarer put up dummy's king and then ruffed a club. He cashed the diamond ace, ruffed a diamond, ruffed another club and a second diamond, then led a club from dummy. East, clutching his heart queen in a death grip, discarded a diamond. Declarer ruffed low and hopefully laid down the trump ace. West's jack and East's queen dropped as one card, and dummy's spade king and established club rounded out the contract.

If East had not been so fond of his blank trump queen and had ruffed the fourth club with that card, he would have established West's jack as the setting trick.

On the Record

By Claudia Cassidy

Koussevitsky at the Helm.

Records by Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston orchestra are too rare not to be treasured, even when they hold something less than a masterpiece. A new Victor album [M-962; two 12-inch records] offers Arthur Foote's Suite for Strings in E major, which might have been written by a New England Tschaikowsky with a craftsman's knowledge of Bach. It is attractive, not very original music, with a pizzicato section plucked straight from the Russian's Fourth Symphony. The performance has the radiance, the finesse, and the sheer listening luxury typical of what is probably the finest orchestra in the world.

Hungarian Melody.

Chamber music with a Hungarian gypsy accent is Dohnányi's Quintet in C minor, for piano and strings, played by Edward Kilenyi and the Roth String quartet [Columbia M-546; four 12-inch records]. Facile, melodious, with a spontaneity characteristic of the composer, it was the work he numbered opus 1. Performance and recording are good, but Mr. Kilenyi goes splashily overboard on the last side with the presto from the Ruralia hungarica. Better Dohnányi is to be found in the Serenade, recorded not so long ago by Heifetz, Primrose, and Feuermann.

Authoritative Schubert.

Now that Lotte Lehmann has retired from opera and no longer even comes to us in recital, records are our only contact with the finest of the lieder singers. With Paul Ulanowsky at the piano, she has a new Columbia single of two of Schubert's songs, "Die Junge Nonne" and "Der Doppelgänger." There just isn't any one like her when it comes to capturing and projecting a mood.

DERBY PREVIEW IS OFFERED AT JAMAICA TODAY

18 Eligibles Will Run in Wood.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 21.—The tip-off that horsemen are conceding nothing to Pukka Gin and Stir Up as far as the race for the 3 year old championship is concerned is the fact that 20 high class speedsters, including 18 Kentucky Derby eligibles, have been named over night for tomorrow's 20th running of the

Mrs. Payne Whitney. Col. C. V. Whitney.

The surprisingly big entry list resulted in the stake being split into two sections for the first time. Despite the split the purse for the mile and one-sixteenth classic was doubled. Each squad will be shooting for a $25,000 added pot.

Co-Favorites Opposed.

The first section will bring together, fortunately, the co-favorites for the Derby—Col. C. V. Whitney's Pukka Gin and Greentree stable's Stir Up, as well as Will Hells' Olympic Zenith, Hirsch Jacobs' Stymie, and Mrs. Donald H. Peters' Bull Dandy, all well thought of as Derby hopefuls. Interest in the second section centers on George D. Widener's Lucky Draw, which will be making his 1944 debut after a juvenile career of high promise. The Widener colt will be opposed by such good ones as Fox Brownie, Free Lance, Plucky Maud, the Shuttinger-trained entry of Magellan and Hoodoo [the latter a stablemate of Pukka Gin], and Broad Grin, a barnmate of Stir Up.

Only one filly will answer the challenge of the Wood—Lady F. Ranch's Plucky Maud, a swift daughter of Sir Galahad 3d-Maud Miller.

All Likely to Start.

Despite the early morning rain today, the Jamaica track stayed fast. It was raining intermittently tonight, but if the same condition holds for tomorrow afternoon, it's very likely that all named for the Wood will go to the post.

Since Pukka Gin, solid son of Firethorn, was beaten in his section of the Experimental handicap a little over a week ago, there has been much conjecture over the report, unconfirmed, that the colt is unsound. If he is unsound, Trainer Andy Shuttinger doesn't know anything about it, and it's sound reasoning that he wouldn't have been named for the Wood if he had shown the least signs of being in distress.

Travel Under Derby Impost.

All entries in the Wood tomorrow will travel under the Derby impost of 126 pounds, with the exception of the filly Plucky Maud and Magellan, which has yet to prance to the winner's circle. Magellan, incidentally, is being whispered around as a horse to watch, if not tomorrow, then in the near future. A chestnut son of the great Discovery, the Lt. J. M. Roebling-owned colt showed flashes of speed in some high-class heats as a juvenile, but never could do better than second. Magellan and Plucky Maud will carry 121 pounds.

PROBABLE MAJOR LEAGUE PITCHERS IN GAMES TODAY

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

New York at Brooklyn—Voiselle [1-0] vs. Gregg [0-1].
Philadelphia at Boston—Raffensberger [0-0] vs. Andrews [0-0].
St. Louis at Chicago—Gumbert [0-0] vs. Wyse [1-0].

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Boston at Philadelphia—Hausmann [0-0] vs. Newsom [0-0].
Detroit at Cleveland—Gorsica [0-0] vs. Embree [0-0].

BY ARCH WARD.

GREASY NEALE, the Philadelphia Eagles' coach, would rather talk baseball than football. . . . When Frankie Frisch was starring for the Cardinals, Neale was one of the club's coaches. . . . He suggested that if Frankie would run out ground balls he wouldn't hit into so many double plays. . . . "Why, I never was as fast as you," said Neale as the clincher, "but I never grounded into a double play." "You never hit one hard enough," cracked Frisch, thereby ending the argument. . . . Bill McKechnie of the Reds will miss Van Harrington, the little speedster who swiped 52 bases for Syracuse last year. . . . Harrington, now in uniform, would have fitted beautifully into McKechnie's offensive plans. . . . The Philadelphia Athletics were whitewashed by every other club in the American league last summer. . . . All told, the A's were shut out 24 times. . . . Jimmy McLarnin is running a machine in a Los Angeles airplane plant. . . . Henry Armstrong, who was barred from fighting in many states because of failing sight, was accepted by the army and there was no "limited service" notation on his induction records. . . . Pacific coast fans have been assured by League President Pants Rowland that the umpiring will be of big league caliber this season. . . . Rowland, an old arbiter, will tour the circuit to see how things are going from time to time.

Members of the Red Wings competed in a canoe tilting contest in Detroit's sportsmen's show for $750 in prizes. . . . Coach Fritz Crisler of Michigan urges universities and colleges to make three years of physical education compulsory after the war. . . . Crisler foresees 4,000 Michigan students taking part in a program that would cost $300,000 annually with the expense paid from football revenue. . . . While waiting for time to begin his boot training in the navy, Bill Dickey worked out daily with the Little Rock baseball club. . . . Birmingham is planning a big indoor hockey plant when materials are available. . . . When the history of baseball in war time is written a special chapter should be devoted to the American association. . . . AA clubs have seen all their players of even average ability grabbed by the majors; they have battled the hazards of transportation, but there has been no hint of abandoning or even curtailing schedules and no talk of transferring franchises. . . . When baseball booms with the return of peace, and it will, association club owners will deserve the resultant prosperity.

Some Day, Soldier.

We'll climb a mountain high
And watch a golden sunset
In a peaceful western sky.

Some day again, my soldier,
We'll find a silvery stream
And on its grassy bank we'll sit
And laugh, and love, and dream.

Some day again, my soldier,
When bombs and cannon cease,
We'll build our little dream house
In a land of hope and peace.

And then some day, my soldier,
You'll look at me and say:
"Remember when dictators thought We'd give all this away?"
—Bea of Ole I. C.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., April 21.—Two home runs by Mike Kreevich, for many years a White Sox pet, accounted for four of the five runs which the St. Louis Browns acquired today to beat Thornton Lee and fellow Chicagoans, 5 to 3.

The Sox did not score until the eighth when Hal Trosky socked a homer with Wally Moses and Thurman Tucker, who had singled, on base. Previous to Trosky's giant smack, Moses, with three hits, and Tucker, with two, were the only Chicagoans who had hit safely. Twice before in the contest Moses and Tucker, who did not play in the Chicago opener, were on base but Trosky supplied infield outs. But there was no mistake about his swing in the eighth. Hal hit the right field pavilion roof with a rising line smash.

Fourth Straight for Browns.

After making three hits and four runs off Lee in the first inning, the Browns were held to two singles and Kreevich's second homer in his remaining six innings. Gordon Maltzberger held the Browns to a single in the eighth and completed his chore by striking out the last two Brownie batsmen.

The outcome gave the Browns four victories to no defeats this season. The Sox have won one and lost one.

Kreevich Spoils Things.

Don Gutteridge, Browns' lead-off man, lost no time in getting the first inning misfortune under way. He pushed off with a single to center. Hal Epps eased things momentarily when he lined to Skeeter Webb, but St. Louis progress was resumed when George McQuinn singled to put Gutteridge on third and Vern Stephens walked, loading the bases. Frank Demaree flied to Moses and Gutteridge scored. Thus, with two down, Kreevich didn't seem such a threat until he busted one right into the left field stands, scoring behind McQuinn and Stephens. Mark Christman ended the inning with an easy bouncer to Grey Clarke.

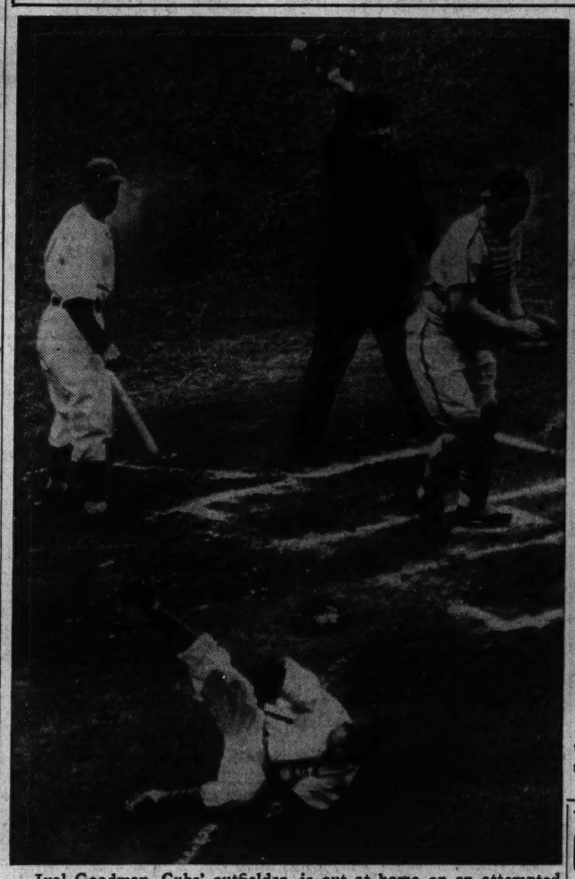
Mike Does It Again.

It took the Sox the first three innings to bat around, but in the fourth they put runners on third and second without getting the ball out of the infield. With one down in this big fourth Moses singled with one down and Tucker walked. The runners advanced on Trosky's tap to Gutteridge, but the rally ended when Ralph Hodgin fouled out to Myron Hayworth.

Moses and Tucker got on base again in the sixth inning but this time Wally died on second and Tucker on first. The pair singled after two were down, then the inning ended with Trosky's bouncer to Potter.

No one was on base when Kreevich blasted his second homer. Stephens and Demaree had supplied easy outs in the sixth just before Mike socked No. 2, which was a virtual duplicate of No. 1.

PRELUDE TO SUMMER OUT NORTH



Ival Goodman, Cubs' outfielder, is out at home on an attempted double steal in second inning of yesterday's game with the St. Louis Cardinals in Wrigley field. Catcher Walker Cooper makes the putout as Billy Holm awaits his turn at bat. The umpire is Lynton (Dusty) Boggess. The Cardinals won, 4 to 0, behind the four hit pitching of Harry Brecheen. It was the Cards' third straight victory, and opened the National league season in Wrigley field.

Pro Football League Plans 11 Team Lineup for 1944

BY EDWARD PRELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., April 21.—Eleven teams will take the field next season in the National Football league. This was determined shortly before midnight tonight, at which time the task of drawing a schedule for the unweildly circuit started and continued into the early morning hours. As representatives of each team were polled on their 1944 intentions, there were affirmatives from all. As matters now stand, there are six teams in the east and five in the west, which poses a knottly schedule problem. In the east are Boston, New York, Brooklyn, Washington, Pittsburgh, and Philadelphia. Western teams are Chicago Bears, Chicago Cardinals, Green Bay, Detroit, and Cleveland.

Abolish Pro Bowl.

Rooney will merge only if half of the games are played in Pittsburgh. Moreover, he'll be particular, he said, with which team he enters a partnership. He already has rejected a merger proposal by the Brooklyn Dodgers and said he wasn't interested in combining with the newly organized Boston Yankees.

Before the dinner hour, only Commissioner Elmer Layden's report and that of Dennis Shea, treasurer, were to be heard before the schedule battle started.

Layden was armed with several 11-team schedules to submit and also others of smaller size. Complementing these were tentative schedules drawn up by most of the competing teams.

The traditional rivalry between the eastern and western sections of the league came into the open earlier in the day when the west narrowly beat a proposal calling for the league offices to be transferred from Chicago to an eastern city every five years. It needed a four-fifths vote of 11 members or 9 to 2. The two Chicago teams and Detroit voted it down.

Started Six Years Ago.

The Pro Bowl game, something of a fixture after the championship game each season was abolished in a by-law change which prohibits any post-season strictly within the league. The rule reads:

"No player can participate in an exhibition game after the schedule of his club has been finished, without permission of the commissioner. He may grant permission for a player to appear in only one such exhibition game and then to no more than two men from any one club for such an exhibition."

Dennis J. Shea was reelected league treasurer for three years. The contract of George A. Strickler, director of press relations, was extended for three years by Commissioner Layden. The commissioner's five year contract has two more years to run.

Court Affirms Orlando's Draft Dodge Sentence

Cincinnati, O., April 21 (AP).—A four year prison term and $2,000 fine imposed on James Vincent Orlando, professional hockey player and former member of the Detroit Red Wings, for violation of the selective service law, was affirmed without written opinion today by the sixth United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Orlando was accused of falsely representing himself to his draft board as a mechanic on the basis of employment in a Canadian factory.

HINSDALE TITLE AT STAKE TODAY IN TRACK MEET

Hinsdale township high school will defend its Du Page county track and field championship this afternoon at Hinsdale. Eight schools are entered with York of Elmhurst picked to replace the host school as champions.

Also rated among the leaders are Wheaton, Naperville, and Hinsdale, which won last year's event with 55 5-6 points. Hinsdale also won the the conference and district championships last season. Other entrants are Glenbard, Downers Grove, Bensenville, and West Chicago.

Marshall Ends Lamotta's Victory String at 9 Bouts

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The Cubs, who opened the season in the role of hitless wonders, refused to change their act yesterday while holding their 1944 Wrigley field inaugural. They confined themselves to the picking of four base hits out of the wintry breezes, a total so modest that the champion St. Louis Cardinals experienced little difficulty fabricating a 4 to 0 score before 4,783 cash customers and 281 service guests.

Actually, Jim Wilson's boys, despite the skimpy hitting that raised their season's stock pile to 16 in four engagements, provided an argument far stiffer than indicated by the final count. As long as the veteran Paul Derringer was on the mound, which was eight innings, the titleholders were throttled down to a homer by Martin Marion which came just before the ex-Cincinnati Red was withdrawn. The homer would have been sufficient, but in the interests of exercise the unbeaten visitors serenaded John Burrows and Paul Erickson with three runs in the ninth.

Brecheen in Top Form.

If the Cubs don't care to attribute their four safeties to their own feebleness, they can give credit to Harry Brecheen's southpawing. Whichever it was, the Cubs didn't waste much energy as base runners while trying to get a run. In five of the nine innings they didn't put one man on base. In each of two sessions they put one on base, both after two were out. In the two other innings they did a bit better, having two on in the second and another pair in the eighth when the desperate Wilson was led to free employment of pinch batters, one of which produced.

For a fellow whose spring training was more of a rest than a workout because of mishaps, Derringer did a most excellent job. He yielded eight hits in eight innings, but despite the persistent heckling came thru with what was needed under pressure. Some of this was in the shape of three double plays, two of which he started himself.

Cubs On Their Toes.

The Cards tried some dashing base running in the first inning, and the Cubs welcomed the display because it brought on a double play. Emil Verban opened the game by beating out a bunt on Derringer's first pitch. After Johnny Hopp had been tossed out, Stan Musial tapped to Derringer whose throw to Tony York led to the eventual demise of Verban between the bases, followed quickly

OUTDOORS SHOW TO OPEN TODAY

Tribune Casting Features Arena Event.

BY BOB BECKER.

The International Sportsmen's Outdoor show is all ready to open today at 1 p. m. in the Chicago Arena, 333 E. Erie st.

Floor shows are scheduled for 3:30 p. m. and 9:30 p. m. each day with the final performance on the evening of April 30.

The war and the outdoors are brought together in this year's show, the sixth of its kind in Chicago. Special features, including "Miss America on Parade," are sponsored by the women's reserve of the United States marines. An exhibit to encourage physical fitness as a feature of the war program has been installed by the United States government.

Illinois Display Largest.

Outdoor atmosphere in the building is provided largely by the woodland settings of various state and resort exhibits. The largest display is sponsored by the Illinois department of conservation which will present wild life in its natural habitat.

Other states with department of conservation exhibits which will stress recreational facilities within their borders are Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan. Many resorts from the north country, including Canada, also have displays in the show.

Events Each Day.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE has arranged for casting contests to be held every day of the show. The first event under the sponsorship of this newspaper is scheduled for this evening at 7:30 o'clock when club casters take over the pool and begin their competition.

Only casters whose last names begin with the letters A thru G will compete tonight. Contestants may start their practice at the pool at 7 p. m. Promptly at 7:30, Bill Butler, manager of the casting tournament, will begin the bait casting event.

Cammack to Compete.

Seaman Bobby Cammack, winner of the fishermen's event in last year's casting tournament and a competitor in the last 10 Tribune contests, will compete in the event to be held Tuesday night.

Cammack also will take part in the floor show casting contests other evenings next week unless given additional assignments by his commanding officers at the naval radio school, University of Chicago.

Human Seal Returns.

Gessner will put his Dobermann pinschers thru a war program routine. The dogs have received much the same training as that given to canines used by the army and marines. This includes the daring work of dogs in extinguishing fuses of the enemy's time bombs.

Sharkey, the human seal, is back again this year with a new routine including imitations he used in a recent revue in Radio City, New York. Since his last appearance here he has added a new distinction, that of being the only seal to ever give a performance in the White House.

GIANTS DEFEAT DODGERS, 3 TO 2, FOR 4TH IN ROW

Adams Spoils Brooklyn's Home Opener.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 21 (AP).—It took Ace Adams four years to see both the start and finish of an opening day ball game, but the veteran relief artist, who appeared in 70 games a year ago but started only three, was present for both today as he ruined the day for 11,861 Ebbets field customers by hurling the New York Giants to a 3 to 2 decision over the Dodgers in Brooklyn's home opener.

Ducky Medwick, a Dodger of yesteryear, helped Ace with two singles that drove in two of the Giants' scores.

It was the fourth straight for Mel Ott's men.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., April 21.—Bill Dietrich, who always is good in the spring and who has looked better than usual in training this year, is to pitch for the White Sox against the Browns tomorrow. He will be opposed by Lefty Al Hollingsworth.

Manager Jim Dykes, impressed at finding the Browns possessed of three victories and no defeats when he arrived here last night, didn't wait until today's contest to announce he will come back with Orval Grove in one of Sunday's games against the Browns.

CUBS HELD TO 4 HITS; CARDS TRIUMPH, 4 TO 0

A single by Ray Sanders with one out was the extent of the Cards' assault in the second. In the home half the Cubs made motions indicating serious intentions of getting a man around to the plate. Ival Goodman, who led off, was clipped by a pitched ball and Andy Pafko moved him to second with an infield hit. The orthodox bunt was attempted by York, but he couldn't make it so took a swing which resulted in a liner to Hopp. Bill Schuster forced Pafko, putting Goodman on third, whereupon a double steal was started. It wasn't finished, Goodman being nailed inches short of his goal.

Cards Make Little Headway.

The Cards opened with hits in both the fourth and fifth, but in neither case was much headway made. The fourth inning hit was a single by Musial, but he was forced by W. Cooper and the next two batters hoisted to Pafko. Danny Litwhiler's single started the fifth, but a double play was pulled on Martin Marion's grounder to Schuster. Then Brecheen whistled a single past Derringer's cap and was forced by Verban. Musial singled again in the sixth with one out, but this was stopped by another double play.

Just after Marion had pasted his homer into the left field seating space at the start of the eighth, the Cubs made another attempt to warm up the customers. Ed Sauer batted for Schuster to open the home half and was dusted off with three strikes. Roy Easterwood swung for Bill Holm and doubled to right whereupon Jim Foxx was introduced as pinchman for Derringer. He, too, succumbed on strikes. The run was prolonged by a pass to Don Johnson, but ended quickly on Cavarretta's pop to Verban.

That Distressing Ninth.

The ninth inning distress began with Burrows walking Musial who made a nonstop flight to the plate on W. Cooper's double to left. Sanders beat out a bunt, and after Burrows had thrown a pair of wide ones at Kurowski, Erickson was rushed to the rescue. He completed the pass, thus filling the bases with none out. They were loaded only until Litwhiler could single into center, W. Cooper and Sanders scoring. Then Erickson took a short cut to safety by fanning Marion, Brecheen, and Verban in succession.

WYSE TO SEEK NO. 2

Hank Wyse, who pitched the opening day shutout for the Cubs, will try his skill on the Cardinals in the second game of the Wrigley Field series this afternoon. Billy Southworth, the boss of the champions, tentatively nominated Harry Gumbert.

Hy Vandenberg, purchased from the Brewers as possible aid for a fragile pitching staff, reported to the Cubs yesterday. The guy is so tall that Paul Derringer can talk to him without looking down.

The Board of Trade American Legion band tooted pleasingly before the game and between innings. Outside of this there were no opening day ceremonies. Even the noted Lou Novikoff wasn't put on display. He's still ailing as the result of his one-half hour of spring training.

The Cubs yesterday returned Heinz Becker, first baseman, to the Milwaukee Brewers on option with a 24 hour recall proviso. Becker came to the Cubs last season from the Milwaukee American association club.

NEWEST FIRMS MAY GET LEAD IN CIVILIAN WORK

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 21.—New manufacturers are expected to take a prominent part in civilian goods output in the reconversion period following the defeat of one of the axis partners, close observers of production policy said today. Most of the old established companies still will be engaged in war work, it was believed.

This policy will be followed because WPB Chairman Nelson insists that civilian production in the reconversion period must be carried out in the public interest.

Surplus Labor Problem Appears.

Altho no one at WPB was prepared to say to what extent new industries will be invited to move into fields dominated before the war by established companies, the question of alloting material to companies in surplus labor areas so they can turn to needed civilian production already has appeared.

Nelson introduced the question last week when he announced formation of the advisory committee on civilian policy. He said important decisions must be made in the reconversion period and that among them is what to tell a manufacturer who wants to enter a new field and requests allocation of materials.

When representatives of the nine American auto manufacturers met in Washington Monday to plan for reconversion the possibility that newcomers may wish to enter the automobile field when restrictions are lifted was not broached, but it is known the question is troubling the industry.

Issue Turns on Public Need.

That established companies with heavy investments in trade names, good will, and advertising will be unhappy at the prospect of newcomers getting an opportunity at civilian sales when they still are tied down by war contracts is conceded by WPB. However, the agency says the entire issue turns on public needs and success in finding plants that can produce needed articles without slowing the flow of war materials.

Maury Maverick, chairman of the Smaller War Plants corporation, told a senate military affairs subcommittee that altho some people advocate a policy of enforcing war controls and restrictions until such time as big business and small business can reënter civilian production simultaneously, he cannot agree with them.

"It points the road to ruin of small business in this country," he said. "Carried to its logical conclusion, it means that small business must stagnate and mark time until the big producers are ready to go. Such a policy, in my judgment, would be the height of folly and an open invitation to economic disaster."

Can't Bar Civilian Work.

A WPB spokesman said the agency cannot be expected to say that new companies cannot go into production because other companies, operating in tight labor areas on war production, cannot start civilian production.

"It probably will mean that some companies will suffer, but it is a policy that looks to the general public interest, and that is the paramount concern," he said. "After all, the garageman and the grocer who closed their shops and went to war suffered, too."

The question of manufacturing 2 million electric irons is bothering WPB now and Nelson has said that every effort will be made to obtain them. Most flatiron manufacturers are in tight labor areas, tied up with war contracts, but in labor areas 3 and 4 some plants could be converted to making irons.

That thousands of irons will be handled by established companies thru subcontracts to manufacturers able to convert their plants for such work is probable, it was said. However, manufacturers who offer idle plants, a supply of labor and the ability to make good irons undoubtedly will get WPB authorization to enter the field, observers said.

PLIGHT OF CITY MINUS WAR WORK MAY EASE WPB MATERIAL CURBS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 21.—The plight of cities hard hit by population losses and unemployment, because they failed to obtain war contracts, may cause WPB to change the basis on which its central board of appeals decides requests for material for industries.

This was indicated today when it was disclosed that the appeals board was preparing a memorandum in the case of Morris White Fashions, Inc., of Scranton, Pa., which yesterday was denied an order for materials to make women's pocketbooks. A plea of community hardship was made in arguing for the material, but under present WPB regulations that issue may not be considered.

However, the plea that every effort be made to provide work in the Scranton area, where 30,000 persons are unemployed and 8,000 houses are vacant, did not go unnoticed. Yesterday it was disclosed that Dr. A. N. Holcombe, appeals board chairman, was preparing a review of the case for submission to Charles E. Wilson, WPB executive vice chairman, or L. R. Boulware, operations vice chairman.

Sale of U. S. Holdings Held Vast Problem

BY AL CHASE.

The average American business man and industrialist may have a difficult time getting back into a commercial groove after the war, but Uncle Sam will face even greater difficulty in getting out of it, Herbert U. Nelson, executive vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, said yesterday.

Herbert U. Nelson.

Any doubt the federal government is destined to be the largest seller, lessor, donor, and general dispenser of lands, buildings, and machinery of all time, will be dispelled as details of government acquisitions in the last few years are unfolded, Nelson said.

DPC's Holdings Cited.

"For instance, the Defense Plant corporation alone owns 7½ billion dollars of war plants, half of which produce aircraft or plane parts," he said. "Altogether, the agency has 1,788 factories, flying schools, pipe lines, barge lines, and other facilities and utilities."

As for lands and buildings, a review of war time acquisitions recently released by the lands division of the department of justice told of "an investment of $513,277,892 in land alone, 12½ billion acres and 21,000 parcels. The national housing agency owns 523,000 dwellings, 123,000 temporary homes, 52,000 dormitories, and 30,000 trailers. Under government lease are 1,400 warehouses, 2,300 other storage facilities, 2,800 offices and buildings, 800 hospitals, schools and hotels, and 6,762 acres of land for various purposes. In all, 21,886 leases costing $60,457,000 annually."

Much Real Estate Owned.

The civil aeronautics administration has 546 large air fields which cost approximately 400 million dollars. The maritime commission has some 7 million dollars of real estate of its own on which the value of improvements exceeds 425 millions.

"As was pointed out by James F. Byrnes, director of war mobilization, the disposition problem is enormously aggravated because 70 per cent of the government's total plant investment is in projects costing more than 10 million dollars each," Nelson said. "He asserted that the surplus property administrator must be authorized to lease as well as sell the plants and where possible, the plant must be subdivided."

The National Association of Real Estate Boards is continuing its campaign for definite disposition procedures that will bring about an orderly liquidation with eventual full return to private ownership, Nelson said.

New Financing Offered for Next Week Shows Dip

New York, April 21 (AP).—New state and municipal financing scheduled for sale next week amounts to $6,842,000, compared with $41,236,000 in the current week and a weekly average for the year of $16,533,500, the Daily Bond Buyer reported today.

EXPECT BURLINGTON TO ANNOUNCE BROAD FINANCE PLAN TODAY

A broad financing program for the Burlington railroad is expected to be announced today by Ralph Budd, president. Budd declined to comment on the plan yesterday, but in financial circles it was believed the program would involve the refunding of $56,773,000 of Illinois division bonds.

These bonds originally totaled 85 million dollars, but were reduced to $56,773,000 thru repurchases in the last few years. Of the amount still outstanding $33,111,000 are 3½ per cent obligations and $23,662,000 are 4 per cent. Both issues mature July 1, 1949. The road reduced the total by $16,384,000 in 1943 alone, it notified the New York Stock exchange.

Bonds outstanding are expected to be replaced with an issue of 30 million dollars of 25 year first and refunding mortgage bonds, which it is expected will bear 3½ per cent interest. Morgan Stanley & Co. is reported to have arranged sale of the bonds to large institutional investors. The road is expected to raise an additional 10 million dollars thru a one to five year bank loan, maturing quarterly, and to use additional funds from its treasury. The plan is subject to approval by the interstate commerce commission.

REPORT BRITISH, U. S. OIL TALKS MAKE PROGRESS

Washington, D. C., April 21 (AP).—The state department announced today that oil discussions being conducted with representatives of the United Kingdom in Washington "are progressing satisfactorily in their initial stage."

The announcement said talks are proceeding "on the basis of the recognition that ample petroleum supplies available in international trade are necessary for the security and prosperity of nations; that for the foreseeable future the petroleum resources of the world are adequate to assure ample supplies for increasing post-war markets; and that expanding world demand must be met by the orderly flow of oil from the various producing countries of the world."

The discussions are intended to clear the ground for further talks between delegations of high ranking officers of both countries, with Secretary of State Hull to head the American group.

CONTROLS ON OIL WELL DRILLING MATERIAL EASED

Washington, D. C., April 21 (AP).—The petroleum administration for war today relaxed restrictions on the use of critical materials for oil well drilling in Illinois, 15 counties of southwestern Indiana, and 15 counties of western Kentucky. Effect of the order will be to permit closer spacing of wells and to increase petroleum output, Illinois officials have estimated Illinois output will gain 18,000 to 25,000 barrels a day.

Under the order, effective today, spacing of wells will be dependent on the geological formation to which the well will penetrate rather than the depth in feet to which a well is drilled. Net effect will be to permit a maximum of four wells on a 40 acre tract. All wells, regardless of depth, must be at least 300 feet from lines separating unconsolidated properties, instead of 330 feet as at present.

GRAINS UNEVEN; CORN RECEIPTS HALF OF NEEDS

Grain prices closed uneven yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade. Active deliveries of wheat finished ⅛ cent a bushel higher to ⅜ cent lower, the former on July. Oats closed unchanged to ⅛ cent higher. Rye finished unchanged to ⅜ cent lower. Barley was ⅛ cent lower.

The delay in oats seeding and the poor condition of country roads were reflected in limited country offerings of cash corn and small receipts. Arrivals at 12 leading markets were 155,000 bushels, the smallest since last summer. For the week ended yesterday receipts totaled 1,487,000 bushels, or approximately 50 per cent of industrial requirements, compared with 6,128,000 bushels in the corresponding week last year.

DU PONT PLANS EXPANSION OF NYLON OUTPUT

New York, April 21 (AP).—On completion of its nylon expansion program the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., nylon division will be in position to deliver between 22 and 23 million pounds of hosiery yarn a year, Robert A. Ramsdell, director of sales, said today.

Ramsdell told the annual hosiery industry conference, "Assuming satisfactory conditions, our future plans definitely call for enlargement of our nylon production at our two existing plants at Seaford, Del., and Martinsville, Va., as well as building of an additional plant at a site recently acquired near Chattanooga."

Buick to Make 2 New Type Plane Motors

Plans for a large expansion in aircraft engine output at the Buick plant in Melrose Park thru the manufacture of two additional types of Pratt & Whitney motors for Liberator bombers and four engined Douglas C-54 transport planes were disclosed yesterday by Harlow H. Curtice, vice president of General Motors corporation and general manager of Buick.

The new engines are both twin row Wasps, the R-1830-75 and R-200-9, of different dimensions and developing larger horse power than current types. Curtice said two new supply contracts have been signed with the army air forces material command, involving more than 60 million dollars for initial delivery of a specified quantity of both types.

Much Retooling Required.

The program will involve extensive retooling and machinery procurement to meet the proposed schedules. Buick's aviation engine output is divided about evenly between the Melrose Park and Flint, Mich., plants.

At the same time, current Buick production of engines for Liberator bombers and Douglas C-47 cargo planes will be carried on without reduction in volume. Curtice said schedules will be increased as the program advances.

"Stand in" machinery will be placed in the plants, which will begin production of the new engines while the present machines and other equipment continue at work on the previous types. Loss of time and valuable production will thus be avoided, an essential step in maintaining the heavy Liberator bomber program.

45,000 Engines Delivered.

Buick has delivered approximately 45,000 engines to the army air forces. It has assumed responsibility not only of supplying engines for the Liberator bomber program and the new Douglas transports, but for the production of the 1,830 cubic inch displacement P. & W. engines for other purposes.

Schedules for 1944 are 22 per cent higher than the last year's output, Curtice said.

WPB APPROVAL OF AUTO PARTS OUTPUT IS TOLD

New York, April 21 [Special].—Partial reconversion in the automobile industry has been approved by WPB, George T. Christopher, president and general manager of Packard Motor company, disclosed today. He explained that the agreement had been reached between the agency and automobile executives when they met in Washington this week.

Packard and other leading automobile manufacturers will be permitted to take old machine tools out of storage for production of badly needed spare parts to keep the country's automobiles running until they can be replaced by new cars.

The backlog of spare parts is virtually exhausted, but WPB gave permission for this move only on condition that war production is not hampered. Packard, with other leading manufacturers is actually setting up a production line for spare parts, such as crank shafts.

Christopher announced his company had made nearly 35,000 engines since the start of war production and that first quarter war engine output indicated volume for the year will be four and one-half times the company's biggest peace time year.

HOG PRICES DIP; HEAVY RECEIPTS ARE INFLUENCE

Chicago hog prices yesterday fell to the lowest level in almost three months as farmers sold heavily because of price pressure and a tightening grain situation.

Prices of all heavy hogs slumped mostly 50 cents a hundred pounds in the slowest market session of the season. Stock weighing 270 pounds and below sold mostly steady, with those from 200 to 270 pounds supported at the $13.75 floor price. The top was down 5 cents, at $13.80, paid sparingly for sorted 200 to 225 pound hogs.

Weakness prevailed in the other markets. Lambs sold mostly from $16 to $16.40, weak to 15 cents lower than on Thursday. Prices paid for beef cows fell 25 cents more, which brought most cows 50 cents to $1 under a week ago. Steady to weak prices were paid for most other classes of cattle.

STOCK LEADERS MOVE AHEAD IN SLOW SESSION

Profits, Dividend Reports Aid Rise.

New York, April 21 (AP).—Selective investment bidding sent many stocks higher today, but trading was sluggish. Only 801 issues appeared against 848 yesterday.

Timid demand apparently again was based on the belief the recent downswing had put the list in a position to advance on a wide scale when the invasion gets under way. Earnings and dividend reports were helpful. Many customers remained inactive, however, because of the desire for liquidity over the week-end.

Prices improved after a mixed opening and closing gains of fractions were well distributed. There were some 1944 peaks.

Average Is Higher.

The Associated Press 60 stock average was up 0.1 of a point at 51.1. Transfers of 481,240 shares compared with 533,740 the day before and were the second smallest for a full session since last Oct. 14.

Gaining new highs were United States Steel preferred, Sunray Oil, Amerada, Central Foundry, and National Tea. Ahead were Santa Fe, New York Central, Texas and Pacific Coal and Oil, General Motors, Deere, Goodrich, Consolidated Edison, General Electric, North American, Kennecott, and International Telephone.

Among losers were United States Steel common, Standard Oil New Jersey, Chrysler, du Pont, Douglas Aircraft, and Dow Chemical. Flintkote dropped a point at 21¼ on announcement of a proposed common stock offering.

On the Curb market Childs preferred rose 5 points to 34½.

RAIL BONDS CLIMB.

New York, April 21 (AP).—A large number of rail issues advanced as other corporate sections of the bond market held to a narrow range today. The Associated Press index of 20 rails rose 0.4 of a point to 87.2. Gaining a point or more were Wabash 4s and 4½s, Northern Pacific 4½s, 5s, and 6s, New Haven 3½s, Morris & Essex 3½s, Illinois Central 4s, Cleveland Union Terminal 4½s, and Burlington 4½s.

Loans of Western Union and Childs company advanced in the general list. Some South American obligations were active at higher prices. United States government bonds were steady.

CHICAGO LIST GAINS.

Prices made further recovery yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. Perfect Circle reached a new 1944 high at 34½, up 1¼. Chicago corporation, the volume leader, was unchanged. Libby, McNeill & Libby lost a small fraction.

Chambly Canal Is Surveyed as Shorter Route to Canada

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., April 21.—Transport Minister J. E. Michaud said today survey work is going on to determine the condition of Canada's Chambly canal, a 12 mile substandard section of the Richelieu river to Lake Champlain water route from the St. Lawrence river. He termed this the first step in a program to obtain engineering data for the proposed deepening of the canal, or an alternative project, which would raise the entire 80 mile inland waterway to the standard of United States sections of the route.

The project will not be undertaken during the war, but is being urged as a peace time project, he added.

Traffic Drops Sharply.

Sponsors of the improvement to the 100 year old waterway system say traffic over the route has dropped from 750,000 tons a year to less than 100,000 tons a year. If the depth of the 12 mile section is increased from its present 6 feet 6 inches to 12 feet, 1 million tons of traffic a year is in prospect for the route, advocates of the project say.

At present newsprint cargoes going down the river and shipments of bauxite from the West Indies to the Aluminum Company of America plant must travel over the Hudson river and Lake Ontario via the Erie canal, a route that requires two days extra steaming.

Military Value Proved.

Efforts have been made for more than 20 years to have this canal raised to the standard of American canals, but hopes of advocates of the plan are higher now than they have been for many years.

The war has proved the military importance of an inland waterway, the advocates say. If normal canal boats could have used this waterway, much traffic could have been moved over a 452 mile route between New York and Montreal instead of using a 1,670 mile Atlantic ocean route, on part of which it is exposed to enemy attack.

Pulp and paper industry spokesmen and other industries requiring low cost transportation have insisted on the value of the project in urging it as a government undertaking.

Michaud could not forecast when work other than the present survey would be undertaken. Necessary engineering data and a survey of likely benefits must be available before the cabinet can arrive at a decision to proceed with the project, he added.

Tax to Remain Heavy, Phone Men Warned

The tax load will continue burdensome after the war with an estimated post-war debt of at least 300 billion dollars which will require annual reductions that "will in themselves impose a tax burden of no mean proportions," Harold V. Bozell, president of the General Telephone corporation, said yesterday.

Addressing a meeting of the United States Independent Telephone association in the Edgewater Beach hotel, Bozell said the tax structure must be improved in order that the burden may not be too heavy to bear. Two general improvements would include the removal of inequities as much as possible, and specific relief for hardship cases, he asserted.

Double Taxation Criticized.

He condemned the formula for figuring excess profits taxes for regulated public utilities and the "double taxation" of corporation earnings in which the corporation pays a tax on its earnings and then another is paid by stockholders when earnings are distributed.

"The credit against surtax net income which was granted for dividends on preferred stocks of regulated utilities was only one step in removing this inequity," he said. "It might be possible to gain still further credit for certain dividends paid—possibly a limited credit on the common dividends—as a slight repair in the present tax structure."

Individual Rates to Continue.

Bozell predicted that individual graduated income taxes will continue at the extreme percentages now imposed, or close thereto. Also, corporate normal income taxes, surtaxes, and excess profits taxes will continue, he added.

"We will also have excise taxes, and it is not inconceivable that after election a sales tax might be considered," he declared.

175 IGNORE WLB WORK ORDER AND 16,000 MAY BE IDLE

Akron, O., April 21 (AP).—Ignoring a war labor board back to work order, mill room workers at the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company continued today a partial work stoppage which company officials said threatened to halt the work of nearly 16,000 other employes altho the mill room employs only 175 on three shifts, it mixes synthetic and crude rubber which other departments process and even a partial shutdown would curtail production, company spokesmen said.

Frederick H. Bullen, regional WLB director, telegraphed the back to work order to C. Z. Wheeler, president of Goodyear local, CIO United Rubber Workers of America. He said the company "has advised it is ready to treat the grievances immediately on resumption of work."

Sherman H. Dalrymple, international president of URWA, said the stoppage began when workers protested changes made on their time cards by foremen. Company spokesmen said that cards of 17 men on the afternoon shift had been "pulled" because they were not turning in proper time sheets.

IMPORTS CLIMB TO 31 MILLION LONG TONS IN '43

Washington, D. C., April 21 (AP).—Despite U-boats and the closure of many normal trade routes, offshore imports into the United States totaled 31 million long tons in 1943, a tonnage larger than in peace time 1938, WPB announced today.

More than 95 per cent was made up of commodities on the WPB shipping priority list. The small quantity of uncontrolled products entering—4.6 per cent of the total—was given as evidence of the effectiveness of the cargo priority system.

The 1943 total of imports, consisting mainly of raw materials for United States war plants, was 6,800,000 long tons higher than in 1942. However, it was 16,900,000 long tons lower than the record tonnage of 1941, rolled up before the blocking of Pacific trade routes.

HELP WANTED OMITTED ONLY ON SATURDAYS

Because of newsprint restrictions, Help Wanted and Employment Agency ads are omitted on Saturdays.

This enables the Tribune to utilize to the best advantage of readers and advertisers the total weekly supply of paper allocated to such advertising under the Tribune's conservation program.

For Chicago's biggest job directory, consult tomorrow's Sunday Tribune — which prints twice as many job offers as all other Chicago Sunday newspapers combined.

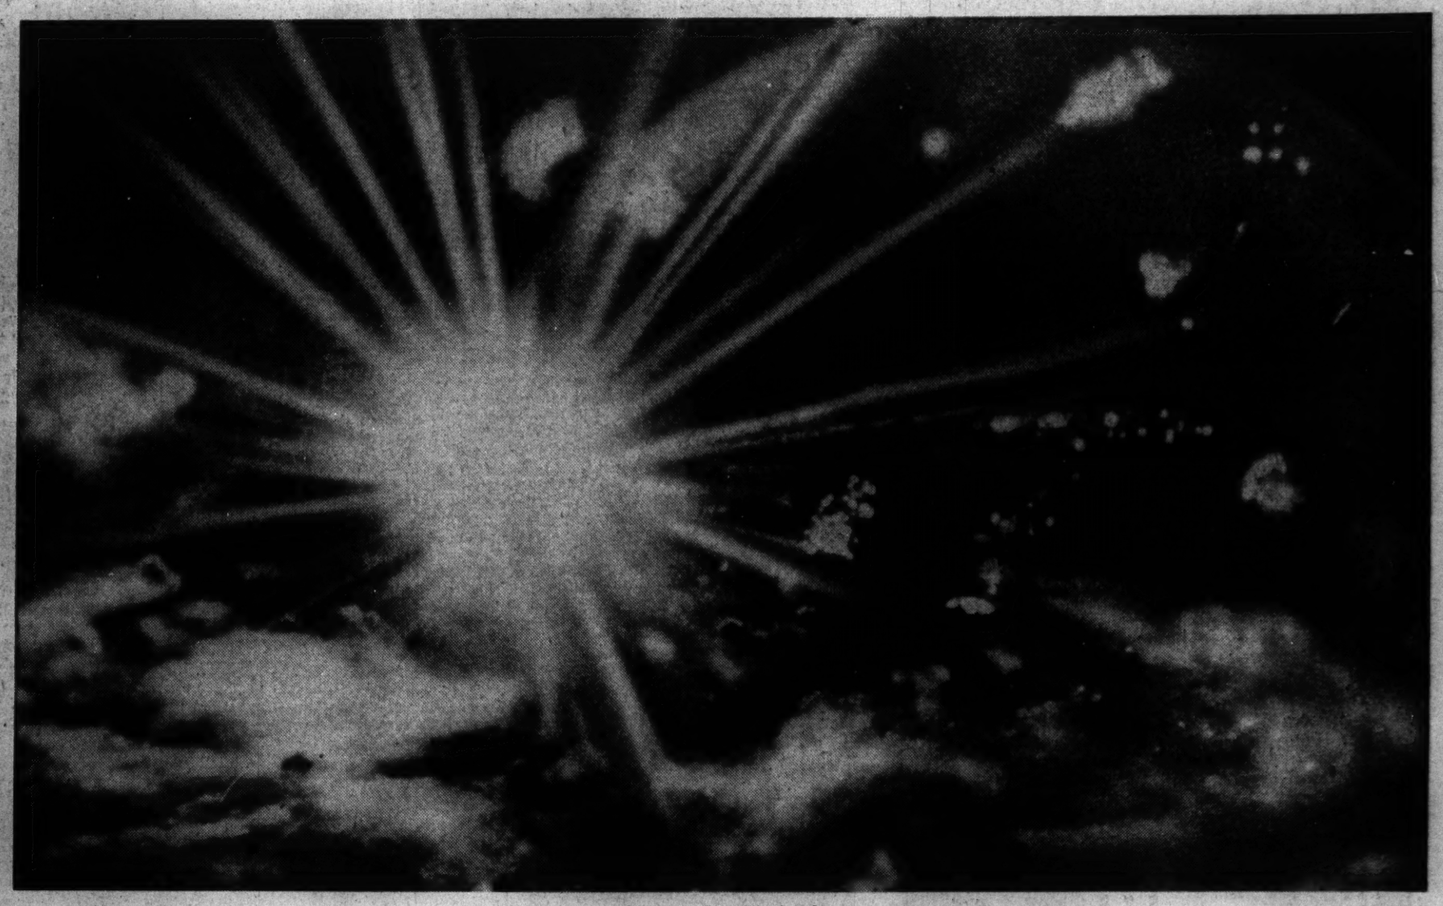
[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

David Day, 5, is prepared for bed in his home in a cave in Dover's chalk cliffs on English channel coast. About 90 live in the caves to escape German bombs.



[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Nazi engineers have designed this new type flare, shown exploding over Madgeburg, Germany, which is said to look like an airplane falling in flames. British bomber crews, who report its increased use recently, have dubbed it the "scarecrow."

[Associated Press Wirephoto: From Signal Corps.]

New anti-personnel mine being used by Nazis in Italy. Mine part (left) has metal inside cement casing. Placed on the peg, it is exploded by contact with fine string.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]
